Laci Peterson's murder: Prosecutors in the Scott Peterson murder trial introduced evidence from dog-handlers that authorities claim places his dead wife at the same marina where the former fertilizer salesman said he launched his boat the day he reported her missing.

Prosecutors claim search dogs picked up Laci Peterson's scent at the Berkeley Marina where Peterson launched what he claims was a solo fishing trip on the morning of Dec. 24, 2002 — the day he later would report his wife missing.

Israel spy case: Two high-ranking Defense Department officials have been briefed by FBI agents investigating a Pentagon analyst suspected of passing U.S. secrets about Iran to the Israeli government, officials said Monday.

The recent briefings of Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz and Douglas Feith, the undersecretary for policy, could indicate that the yearlong FBI probe is nearing a conclusion. No arrests have been made or charges amounced.

Fewer runway errors: Runways at U.S. airports were slightly safer last year than they were the year before, the Federal Aviation Administration said Tuesday.

Fewer people, vehicles and airplanes entered runways by mistake, thus reducing the chance of collisions, the FAA said. The FAA reported 324 so-called runway incursions between Oct. 1, 2002, and Sept. 30, 2003, a 4 percent decrease from 339 in the previous 12 months.

N.J. governor scandal: A former aide to New Jersey Gov. James E. McGreevey who claims he was sexually harassed by the governor says he won't sue, apparently eliminating the prospect of an embarrassing court fight.

The aide, Golan Cipel, said Monday that McGreevey's resignation announcement was sufficient admission of his wrongdoing and he wished to spare New Jersey taxpayers the financial burden of any damages.

McGreevey, 47, announced Aug. 12 that he is gay and would resign from office Nov. 15 because he had an extramarital affair with a man. A spokesman for the governor said Cipel's announcement came as no surprise.

Chechen elections: Russian President Vladimir Putin on Tuesday defended the vote for president of Chechnya as a true reflection of the people's will — despite complaints that the Kremlin-backed candidate who won enjoyed unfair advantages.

who won enjoyed unfair advantages.

"No one can drag people to polling places by force," Putin said. "It is impossible to haul people by the scruff of the neck or by the hair out of their homes."

Alu Alkhanov, Chechnya's top police official, won with 74 percent of the vote Sunday, election officials said.

Russian plane crashes: In his first extenteneous air crashes, Russian President Vladimir Putin said Tuesday that the claim of responsibility by a militant Islamic group shows that fighters in Chechnya have links to international terrorism.

"It's a fact that explosions took place on "It's a fact that explosions took place on "It's a fact that explosion planes," Putin said in televised compents at a news conference. "And if a terrorist organization claimed responsibility for this, and it is linked to al-Qaida, then this confirms a link between certain forces operating on the territory of Chechnya and international terrorism."

Russian investigators have said that terrorism is to blame for both plane crashes last week, which killed 90 people. They said traces of a high explosive were found in the wreckage of both planes, and suspicion is growing that two female Chechen suicide bombers — one on each aircraft — might have brought down the planes.

Sept. 11 trial: The retrial of the only Sept. 11 suspect ever convicted was put on hold for a week Tuesday to allow the defense team time to regroup after their lead lawyer was seriously hurt in a motorcycle accident.

The presiding judge in the case of Mounir el Motassadeq also said he may add longer intervals as a concession to defense lawyers after attorney Josef Graessle-Muenscher was hospitalized Saturday with life-threatening crash injuries.

Coup trial suspended: Equatorial Guinea on Tuesday indefinitely suspended the trial of 19 alleged mercenaries accused in a coup plot in this oil-rich African nation, saying it wanted more information on the alleged roles of Mark Thatcher, son of the former British prime minister, and other international financiers.

The surprise suspension of the 7-day-old trial showed Equatorial Guinea may be seeking to prosecute Thatcher and others in what it says was a foreign-bankrolled plot to over-throw President Teodoro Obiang's 25-year regime in Equatorial Guinea, Africa's third-largest oil producer.

Afghanistan unrest: Afghan authorities seized more than half a ton of explosives and arrested three people near the capital, a day after a deadly car-bombing of a U.S. security company, an official said Tuesday. Security forces discovered 1,300 pounds

Security forces discovered 1,300 pounds of explosives in two houses on Monday in Chahar Asyab, just south of Kabul, a senior intelligence official said.

It was not clear if the men were suspected in Sunday's blast in downtown Kabul that killed as many as 10 people, including three Americans, or what they planned to do with the explosives. He did not identify the type of explosive.

The haul was more than three times larger than the estimated amount of explosives used in the weekend bombing.

Web video shows execution of 12 hostages

Nepalese workers in Iraq allegedly killed by militants

By KIM HOUSEGO The Associated Press

BAGHDAD - A video purporting to show the grisly, execution-style killings of 12 Nepalese workers kidnapped in Iraq was posted Tuesday on a Web site linked to an Islamic militant group

The slayings would mark the largest number of foreign hostages killed at one time by insurgents in Iraq who have seized more than 100 hostages in recent months in their drive to destable lize the country and force coalition troops and foreign workers to

In Katmandu, Nepal's Foreign Minister Minister Prakash Sha ran Mahat said officials still were checking the reports and the government had called an emergency Cabinet meeting.

"If it is true it is shocking because there were no demand or deadlines ... that makes it even more shocking." Mahat said before the meeting.

The video discovered on the site Tuesday showed a masked man in desert camouflage apparently slitting the throat of a blindfolded man lying on the ground. The blindfolded man moaned and a shrill wheeze was heard. The masked man then displayed the head to the camera before resting it on the decapitated body

Other footage showed a man firing single shots from an assault rifle into the back of the heads of 11 others. Blood seeped from their bodies onto the sand

France enters crisis talks to save lives of iournalists held in Iraq

BY PAMELA SAMPSON The Associated Press

PARIS - France intensified efforts Tuesday to save two journalists held hostage in Iraq, convening crisis talks in Paris and around the Arab world as a 24-hour execution deadline set by militants neared.

French President Jacques Chirac said every effort was being made to free the journalists - although his government has steadfastly refused to cave in to kidnappers' demands that a new law banning Islamic head scarves in French public schools be scrapped.

Foreign Minister Michel Barnier launched a second day of emergency diplomacy in the Middle East, pleading for and winning - crucial support from Arab governments and powerful Muslim groups, which praised France for its anti-war stance on Iraq

"Because of France's distinguished position in rejecting the Anglo-American occupation of Iraq, we appeal to the people who kidnapped the jour nalists to spare their lives," said the Islamic Action Front, Jordan's largest opposition group

The French government's mission to free the reporters took on new urgency with re-ports Tuesday that 12 Nepalese hostages had been executed in Iraq. But hopes were steadily rising regarding the fate of Christian Chesnot and Georges Malbrunot, the journalists who disappeared Aug. 19 while traveling to the southern city of

The official Jordanian news agency, Petra, reported from Iraq that it expected the release of the journalists "within the next few hours." The agency said its report was based on "well-informed" sources.

Condemnation of the kidnapping and support for France poured in from around Europe and the Middle East, notably from Baghdad.

Mohammed Bashar al-Faidi, spokesman for the Association of Muslim Scholars, an influential Sunni group believed to have links to insurgents, made a televised appeal to the group, saying the kidnapping was not the correct way to fight the French law

Number of U.S. wounded nears 7,000, DOD says

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The number of Ameritroops wounded in Iraq since the U.S.-led invasion in March 2003 is approaching 7,000, according to figures published Tuesday by the Pentagon. The death toll for U.S. military personnel is 975, plus three De-fense Department civilians.

The wounded total has approximately doubled since mid-April, when casualties and deaths mounted rapidly as the insurgency intensified. The death toll over that period has grown by about 300.

The Pentagon, which generally updates its casualty count each week, said the number of wounded stands at 6.916, up 226 from a week earlier. In the two months since the United States handed over political sovereignty to an interim Iraq government, the wounded total has grown by about 1,500.

The vast majority of casualties have been Marines and soldiers, although the Pentagon announced Tuesday the 13th member of the Air Force to die in Iraq. Airman 1st Class Carl L. Anderson Jr., 21, of Georgetown, S.C., was killed by a roadside bomb on Sunday near the northern city of Mosul. He was assigned to the 3rd Logistics Readiness Squadron based at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Alaska.

HAGERSTOWN, Md. Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Ivan L. "Chip" Frederick will plead guilty to assault, maltreating Iragi detainees and committing an indecent act at his court-martial Oct. 20, his civilian defense attorney said Monday.

each offense would carry a combined maximum penalty of six years and three months in prison and a dishonorable discharge, according to the Military Judges' Benchbook.

The maximum prison term for all of his alleged offenses total 13 years, three months.

Frederick said in an interview with the German magazine Der Spiegel that he was responsible for his actions and that military intelligence personnel encouraged the humiliation of prison-mony from an unspecified number of Iraqi detainees, but the judge refused after a government lawyer said it would be very difficult to find them.

"At some point it could happen but certainly not this week," said prosecutors. Benson said the detainees are moved around Iraq and getting them together for testimony would involve a armed convoy, guards and translators.

Witness: Marine beat prisoners to show dominance

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. -

A Marine accused of kicking a handcuffed Iraqi prisoner who later died said he beat prisoners "to establish who's in charge" and that he treated federal inmates at his civilian job the same way, a witness testified Monday.

John Hennagin, a retired Marine, said he confronted Sgt. Gary Pittman about putting his knee in the stomachs of two Iraqi prisoners at Camp Whitehorse, a makeshift lockup outside Nasiriyah.

"'You have to establish who's in charge,' "Hennagin said, quot-ing Pittman. Pittman also said prisoners were treated the same way at a federal prison in New York, Hennagin testified. Pittman's court-martial is believed to be the first stemming from the death of a U.S. military prisoner in Iraq. He faces up to two years in military prison if he is convicted of assault and derelic-tion of duty.

Pittman, 40, is accused of karate-kicking Nagem Hatab, who was later found dead. Hennagin.

who was a translator at the compound, testified he did not see Pittman kick Hatah

Hatab, 52, had been rumored to be an official of Saddam Hussein's Baath Party and part of the ambush of a U.S. Army convoy that left 11 soldiers dead and led to the capture of Pfc. Jessica Lynch and five others

Lance Cpl. Abdul Montaser, who was present when Marines captured Hatab, testified that he told Pittman that Hatab "was a big capture" because of the possible link to Lynch.

Hennagin, who testified under grant of immunity, acknowledged under cross-evamination that he suffered from a brain tumor that has caused short-term memory loss. He said he was sure, however, that he saw Pittman beat two detainees.

Hennagin also acknowledged he had applied for conscientious objector status while serving in the Marines in 1999, but his request had been denied. Hatab is among 37 Iragi and Afghan prisoners whose deaths are under investigation.

Panel decides against freeing Gitmo prisoners

BY FRANK GRIFFITHS The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico - U.S. military review panels decided not to release five detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, concluding the men are properly classified as "enemy combatants," an official said Monday. The decision brought to 19 the number of cases in which rulings have been made, said Navy Cmdr. Beci Brenton, a Pentagon spokes-woman. None of those have been ordered freed.

The military has heard 42 cases to date, and rulings on the others have yet to be confirmed and made public

The review tribunals are evaluating whether each of the 585 detainees at the U.S. naval base are properly held as an "enemy com-batant" or should be freed. They are separate from a military com mission that held pretrial hearings for four men last week.

Human rights lawyers have criticized the hearings, saying they fail to satisfy a Supreme Court ruling that prisoners may contest their detention in civilian courts.

Meanwhile, a U.S.-based law ver met with two British detainees Monday, marking the first time an attorney has met Guantanamo detainees not facing formal charges, a U.S. military official said on condition of anonymity.

The lawyer, Gitanjali Gutierrez, met with detainees Moazzam Begg and Feroz Abbasi, the official said. No information was available about what they discussed.

Following the Supreme Court ruling in June, the U.S. government has begun issuing clearances for some lawyers to visit detainees who haven't been charged.

Two other lawyers canceled plans for their trips this past weekend, saying the government told them future meetings may not be allowed.

$3.34B to rebuild Iraq may go to security

State Department considers rerouting funds to boost Iraqi forces

WASHINGTON - The State Department is considering whether $3.34 billion intended for public works projects in Iraq should be used instead to bolster security, a State Department official said Monday.

The money would be part of $18.4 billion Congress approved last year for rebuilding Iraq. Though the Bush administration said then the money was needed urgently, little has been spent because of bureaucratic delays and security problems

The U.S. ambassador to Iraq, John Negroponte, has recommended to State Department officials that the $3.34 billion be reallocated from water, sewage and electricity projects. If security is improved, oil production could be increased, eventually making more money available for recon struction, the official said, speaking on the hcondition of anonymity. Negroponte seeks to add 45.000 police, 16.000 border guards and 20 new national guard battalions of 700 to 800 men each.

Officials at the Pentagon said that billions of dollars more for security did not automatically translate to more U.S. troops or longer deployments, "This has nothing to do with U.S. troops," said a defense official. "If this funding is approved, the Iraqi Secu-rity forces would likely get the money, under the Security Transition Command" headed by U.S. Army Lt. Gen. David Petraeus, who took command of the training of all Iraqi troops in June. The U.S.-led coalition is seeking to grow Iraqi security forces by 50,000 in the near term, and the funding could be used to recruit, train and equip the Iraqi forces, the defense official said. He did not have specifics since the money has not been approved for transfer. The basic principle ... has been Iraqi self-government and Iraqi-self security The shift in funds would be applicable "to the extent that U.S. forces are involved in making that happen," the official said. "The sooner Iraqi forces take over, the less burden on U.S. forces and multinational co-

The $18.4 billion was part of an $87 billion package Bush signed Nov. 6, mostly for Iraq and Afghanistan. When the propos al was presented to Congress, administration officials said emergency funding for reconstruction was as urgently needed as money for military operations.

"Every day that the Iraqis do not get power, do not get water, do not get sewage treatment is a day when their quality of life is such that they're less inclined to view us as liberators and more inclined to view us as occupiers, and that also increases the danger to our men and women." L. Paul Bremer, then head of the U.S. occupation authority, told the Senate Armed Services Committee last September.

That package was shaped mostly by the Defense Department, which was overseeing reconstruction as well as military activities at the time. The State Department has become the main agency overseeing reconstruction projects since the June 28 transfer of authority to an interim Iraqi govern-

The request for transfer is exactly what the United States needs to do at this point to bring about a successful mission in Iraq said Anthony Cordesman, an analyst with the Center for Strategic and International Studies whose expertise includes Middle East military balance, critical infrastructure protection, and the wars in Iraq and

"Having large and long-lead economic programs is not working at this point," Cordesman said. "It's not changing the hearts and minds and it's creating targets for saboteurs. ... This is exactly what is needed and is really a long overdue change in U.S. aid policy in Iraq.

The money transfer, if approved by Con-gress, should be spent to not just increase the number of Iraqi security forces, but to better train and equip them, which in turn would expedite the transfer of responsibility from U.S. and coalition forces to Iraqi forces, Cordesman said.

"It's the best way to reduce the U.S. commitment of U.S. forces in Iraq in a way that provides a good chance at some kind of stability in the Iraqi government.'

U.S. warplanes fire on Afghan village

A dozen reported dead; Danish relief camp hit

By STEPHEN GRAHAM The Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan warplanes bombed an Afghan village in the heat of a battle between U.S.-led forces and insurgents, killing more than a dozen people and striking the camp of a Danish relief group.

The clash late Monday in Kunar province highlights the risks relief workers face in lawless and impoverished regions of southern and eastern Afghanistan, where coalition forces often clash with Taliban rebels.

The U.S. military said the airstrikes countered an attack by militants on American and Afghan soldiers and that it had killed more than a dozen rebels.

But Afghan officials said the dead included five unarmed civil-Kunar Gov. Sayed Fazel Akbar said the incident began when as sailants fired at Afghan and U.S. military camps near Mano Gai, 105 miles east of the capital, Kabul.

"Then the American planes came and bombarded Weradesh village," where the fire had originated. Akhar said. "Several houses were destroyed." Akbar said five civilians were killed in the American bombard- two men, two children and a woman - but blamed the militants for the bloodshed.

"If the enemy comes into the villages and opens fire on the gov-ernment and coalition, we are obliged to respond," he said. The Danish Committee for Aid to Afghan Refugees, or DACAAR, which had a team working in Weradesh, said several bombs were dropped and that its staff believed eight villagers were killed. The group's 14 staff members fled their darkened camp just before it was caught by one bomb, said Gorm Pedersen, DACAAR's director in Kabul. One worker was slightly injured and much of the group's equipment was damaged.

U.S. soldiers visited the village early Tuesday and told DACAAR staff to draw up an assessment of the damage, Pedersen said.

U.S. spokesman Sgt. Mai. Keith Butler said warplanes had fired various ordnance on targets, in-cluding one laser-guided bomb that hit a vehicle used by mili-

The military insisted no civilians had been hit by American forces, whereas insurgents "fired indiscriminately at villagers" during the four-hour battle.

"All the coalition fire was precision fire," Butler said.

The U.S. Marine Corps will ship to Iraq by this fall 14 new anti-mine type vehicles called the Cougar. The vehicle can be used to protect its Explosive Ordnance Disposal teams and combat engineers from improvised explosive devices, or IEDs, which have claimed dozens of U.S. servicemembers' lives in the past year.

New vehicles aim to protect Marines in Iraq

BY SANDRA JONTZ Stars and Stripes

ARLINGTON, Va. — Marines in Iraq will be get-ting a new batch of vehicles late this fall that will help protect them against improvised explosive devices, or IEDs, the roadside bombs that have killed and maimed dozens of troops in Iraq over the past

The first 14 Cougars, which the Corps will rename Hardened Engineer Vehicle, are slated to go to combat engineers and explosive ordnance disposal teams now in Iraq, arriving in country before Thanksgiving, said Jeff Child, spokesman with the Columbia, S.C.-based Force Protection Inc., which manufactures ballistic and mine protected vehicles through its wholly owned subsidiary Technical Solu-

The Corps bought the vehicles under an expedited "urgent requirement" process because of a great need to protect Marines from the threat of IEDs. said Joe Murgo, team leader for the Corps' Engineer support Equipment and Counter IED systems branch at Marine Corps Base Quantico, Va

"We needed a vehicle designed to specifically take mine blasts from the ground up, to give all-around protection ... and something that is easily maneuverable," Murgo said. Tanks and tracked vehicles proved too large and cumbersome for some of the EOD and engineers' missions, he said.

"The vehicle is designed, with its V-shaped hull, to withstand both AP and AT (anti-personnel and anti-tank) blasts and can protect Marines against IEDs, small arms fire, air bursts, and fragments from [weapons] 155 mm and below," Murgo said.

The Marine Corps contracted through Force Pro-tection Inc./ Technical Solutions Group Inc. to buy Cougars. However, the service thus far has funds to buy 14, Murgo said.

The Cougar, with an average price of $335,000, is a multipurpose vehicle with a capsule designed to protect the driver and crew from both ballistic and mine blasts. According to the manufacturer's Web site, the vehicle can be configured to serve as a mine-protected troop transport vehicle, a weapons platform, a law enforcement special response vehicle, or an EOD/range clearance vehicle.

The Cougar and its sister vehicle, the Tempest, are available in 10-seat versions in the 4-by-2 and 4-by-4 models, and as a 16-seater in the 6-by-6 model, though the Marine Corps did not buy any 4-by-2 models, Child said.

Some of the five-man teams of EOD Marines will get the smaller 4-by-4 versions, while some engineer support battalion Marines will get the longer 6x6 vehicles to help carry their personnel and equipment, Murgo said. But because of the vehicles' versatility, they can be used however ground commanders see fit, he said.

Wasp group stops at Rota on way home

NAVAL STATION ROTA, Spain — The amphibious assault ship USS Wasp and two other ships pulled into Rota on Tuesday for a brief port visit before wrapping up a seven-month deployment as part of the war on terrorism and heading home.

Standing aboard the deck of the Wasp, sailors and Marines watched and took photographs as tugboats pushed and pulled the 844-foot ship into its spot on pier 1. The ship has nearly 3,000 sailors and Marines anxious to get home to their friends and families

Petty Officer 1st Class James Ratliff, 28, of Davie, Fla., is hoping to catch a soccer match while in southern Spain but is excited about going home and reuniting with his wife, who also is in Navy.

"It's been a nice, smooth cruise," he said.
"Just long There's been so much uncertainty with our schedule."

The Wasp is carrying Marines with the Camp Lejeune, N.C.-based 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit. The unit conducted combat operations from Kandahar, Afghanistan, helping to root out terrorists and Taliban fighters and provide security leading up to the country's elections.

Marine Cpl. Seth Hackler, 23, a field radio operator from Springfield, III., said the most difficult part about serving in Afghanistan was the heat. Temperatures reached 118 degrees during the day in Kandahar

The most obscure thing he missed most while he was in arid and dusty Afghanistan was green grass. He was amazed at the Afghan culture and how they are able to live on so much less than what Americans do. "It was an eye-opener," he said.

While the Marines were in Afghanistan, the Wasp group participated in ship and boat interdictions near the Horn of Africa and participated in maritime exercises.

USAFE says Alconbury is a real looker

Sprucing up brings in $50,000 prize for best small base

BY RON JENSEN

Stars and Stripes

RAF ALCONBURY, England — An empty building in the heart of RAF Alconbury will soon be put to use, thanks to a $50,000 award the base received for being named the best-looking small base in the U.S. Air Forces in Europe.

The home of the 423rd Air Base Squadron took the prize given to the geographically separated base that best exemplified Combat Proud, one of 14 Combat and Special-Interest Programs established a year ago by USAFE commander Gen. Robert H. "Doc" Foglesong.

"We definitely could not have done it with just a handful of folks working for [the civil engineer squadron]," said Maj. Matt Greene, commander of the 423rd Civil Engineer Squadron. "We tried to incorporate everyone, not just the blue-suiters."

He said the entire base population played a role in trimming hedges, painting buildings, pulling weeds and everything else that had to be done to take the top prize.

Two weeks ago, RAF Lakenheath, England, was named the best-looking large base in the command and pocketed $100,000.

Greene said the money from the Combat Proud honor would be used to renovate a building constructed in the 1960s as a Stars and Stripes bookstore. It has more than 2,000 square feet, but has no running water.

"We've been looking for a way to utilize it," he said.

The money will be used to put in water and toilets, and to install kitchen counters and various other upgrades. It will be a place for community gatherings, particularly for parents with small children. Work will be done by the base staff and will begin in October.

"It's going to impact a lot of people," Greene said.

Bases such as RAF Alconbury, which has a total population of 5,000, were not in the original base appearance competition. But a second look prompted a change of heart.

"I think that was a good call," Greene said. "You neglect the GSUs, you neglect a lot of folks and a lot of installations." An initial look at the base in December may have given Greene second thoughts, however. It would not have scored well at the time.

"We hadn't neglected base appearance, but we didn't have a formal plan in place" that would address the Combat Proud guidelines, he said.

Master Sgt. Jon Stirewalt, superintendent of civil engineer operations, said everyone at Alconbury was invited to take part in sprucing up the base, which provides support for the European Command Joint Analysis Center a few miles away at RAF Molesworth.

With a civil engineer squadron member acting as a team expert, teams of volunteers attacked the base — painting light poles and buildings, trimming and cutting things that needed to be trimmed and cut. Managers of each building were educated on watching out for trash or unsightly tiems left around the building. All the cigarette butt cans were painted a familiar shade of brown.

When the USAFE inspection team arrived in late August, everything was ready.

Greene said the appearance of a base is important to performing the mission.

"By having world-class facilities, we're able to provide world-class support," he said. "It keeps everybody happy."

Greene said the plan to renovate the building on base fits in with next year's Combat Proud competition. That contest will judge bases on the appearance of the interiors of their buildings.

AF finds more sex assaults occur than initially thought

BY ANGELA K. BROWN The Associated Press

Sexual assaults at U.S. Air Force bases are more widespread than officials first believed and addressing the problem will require major institutional changes, according to an Air Force report released Monday.

Air Force teams investigated 85 installations in the United States and overseas and found that many women failed to report rapes because they feared they would be disciplined. The report said "respondents repeatedly described sexual assault as a cultural issue in need of a compelling and sustained message.

The four-month probe also found that response programs for victims were inadequate, that the Air Force has lacked a formal sexual assault policy, and that existing training has been sporadic and focused more on sexual harassment rather than rape.

'Addressing sexual assault in the U.S. Air Force requires deep. long-lasting, cultural and institutional change," Michael J. Dominguez, Air Force assistant secretary for mannower and reserves, wrote in a preface to the

The study began in February, a ear after a sex abuse scandal surfaced at the Air Force Academy in Colorado.

The academy has overhauled its top leadership and policies on sexual assault after dozens of current and former female cadets complained they were ignored or punished after reporting assaults.

The report recommends major institutional changes, including developing an Air Force-wide sexual assault prevention and response policy; assigning an office to oversee the policy and pro-grams; integrating databases used to report and track rapes; and requiring pre-deployment sexual assault response training for officers.

"The Air Force must do a better job of defining and understanding the crime of sexual as-sault and the behavior that spawns it. Ultimately, the Air Force must work through its commanders to create an institutional environment that refuses to accept or facilitate such behavior. the report said.

Female brigadier general in Germany is first female West Point grad to reach rank

BY MARNI MCENTEE

PANZER KASERNE, Germany — In 1977, Rebecca Halstead became one of the first women admitted to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

On Tuesday, Halstead made another indelible mark on history, becoming the first female West Point graduate to achieve the rank of general officer.

Halstead, deputy commanding general of the 21st Theater Support Command in Kaiserslautern, was promoted to the rank of brigadier general. On Thursday, she moves to her new post as commanding general of the 3rd Corps Support Command in Wiesbaden.

"Somebody had to be first and who better? No one could have been better in my mind," said retired Maj. Gen. Dewitt Irby during Halstead's frocking ceremony at Panzer Kaserne's parade

"In every instance, she has made an example for all to emulate. She has truly been a trendsetter in the Army," Irby said.

ter in the Army," Irby said.
Irby, whom Halstead called her mentor and occasional "tormenter," and Halstead's father, Richard, pinned a single star on each of her lapels. Her nephew, Joseph Barron, placed her Kevlar helmet with the new brigadier general's rank insignia on her head. And her mother, Betty Jeanne Halstead, helped her snap on a ceremonial gunbelt.

Halstead graduated from West Point in 1981, the second graduating class that included women. Women were first admitted to the academy in 1976, and today they make up 15 percent of the school's 4,000 students, according to the academy Web site.

Halstead, 45, of Willseyville, N.Y., credited her mother for pointing her in the direction of the academy, after seeing a newspaper story that the school had opened its doors to women.

Since then, she has risen swiftly through the ranks, having been promoted four times "below the zone." or earlier than average.

Col. Susan Sowers, commander of the Kaisersalutern-based 37th Transportation Command, who graduated from West Point the year after Halstead, said Halstead has always been dedicated to the Army and her soldiers. The two served as company commanders together at Fort Lewis, Wash., 18 years age.

"She is, without a doubt, one of the best leaders I have ever met." said Sowers, 44, of Tacoma, Sowers noted that women have indeed come a long way in the military. During the U.S. invasion of Grenada, for example, women platoon leaders were yanked back behind the lines after they jumped into the conflict zone, Sowers said.

"There are no front lines or rear lines anymore," Sowers said. "The reality of warfare has helped diminish the gender gap. Women are proving themselves one way or the other, whether the American public is ready or not."

First Lt. Marisa Pace, a 2001 academy graduate, said she related to Halstead's speech because the two came from similar backgrounds.

"It motivates me to go back to my job and do the best I can," said Pace, executive officer of 37th Transportation Command's Headquarters and Headquarters Company. "Maybe one day, I can make it to one-star," said Pace, Halstead said she only had a couple of pieces of advice for women coming up in the ranks: "Number one, don't quit. Number two, refer back to number one," she said.

Writer urges troops to write down war experiences

BY KENT HARRIS Stars and Stripes

VICENZA, Italy — It took years for E.

Ethelbert Miller to digest a few of the defining moments that shaped his life. For Miller — now a famed poet, professor and self-described "literary activist" — those moments include the entry and exit of his older brother into a monastery, his sometimes combative relationship with his mother, the death of his brother and father and growing up black on the East Coast in the 1960s. Miller told a group of soldiers Tuesday at Caserma Ederle that he felt, and still at Caserma Ederle that he felt, and still feels, a need to write down his emotions. So he started penning poetry.

"What can a person learn from your life?" he asked the assembled group, most of whom had seen combat with the 173rd Airborne Brigade in Iraq recently. "What have you been a witness to?"

Miller spent more than an hour telling troops about some of the experiences that he had witnessed and put down in ink. Many of his stories had the soldiers laughing.

There are some stories, even in a wartime environment, that could also earn a few chuckles. But others inspire other emotions. And the National Endowment for the Arts wants to hear them all.

So the NEA is soliciting material from servicemembers and their families on their wartime experiences, according to Maribeth Walton McGinley, a member of the National Council on the Arts. At the end of the series of workshops it is conducting, the NEA plans to select and compile the best of the solidiers' works and publish an anthology.

"You have some wonderful stories to tell that the American people aren't hearing," McGinley told the troops. "We have a World War II generation whose stories are being lost. We want to hear your stories right now."

McGinley, whose Marine Corps colonel husband is stationed in the Pentagon, said it's "the first time that the endowment has focused on programs in the military."

Authors such as Miller and novelist Richard Bausch, who was also in Vicenza on Tuesday, are visiting with troops as part of Operation Homecoming, the NEA initiative encouraged by the Department of Defence.

The object, according to program director Jon Peede, is pretty simple.

"We are encouraging the troops to write about their wartime experiences," he said. Those actually involved in an event have a perspective that can't be duplicated by others who weren't there, he said.

Those words were echoed a short while later by Brig. Gen. Jason Kamiya, the commanding general of the Southern European Task Force (Airborne) who will lead most of the base's active-duty population into Afghanistan early next year.

"No one can write about your experiences and your feelings except for yourselves," he said.

He encouraged soldiers to write down their thoughts during their next big mission and to plan on how they'll do so.

"You do have good stories to tell," he said. "There are people in the States, your peers, that look to all of us in uniform as role models."

The NEA hopes to elicit material from all of the services and their families. Peede said Vicenza is the third base visited, fol-

The next scheduled trips are to Fort Richardson in Alaska and Norfolk, Author Tom Clancy, probably the best-known of the dozens of authors who are volunteering for the project, will make an appearance there to talk to sailors and their families

About a dozen visits are set — presently none of the others are overseas — but Peede said the program's popularity might prompt additional trips.

The published anthology will be distributed free on military bases and libraries according to an NEA spokesman. And even if a submitted work does not make the book, it will become part of a permanent NEA collection chronicling the war.

Some of those present during Miller's presentation said they plan to deploy with pens, paper and plans to produce.

Spc. David Stewart said his tour in Iraq was full of "lots of experiences, but I don't know about just jotting them down."

He said he did write some poetry in country, just to try to get his thoughts on paper to revisit later.

Spc. Phillip Harrill, also a member of 1st Battalion, 508th Infantry Regiment, said he lost most of what he had written in Iraq. He said he wasn't sure how important it was to anyone else.

"Things I wanted to remember for myself," he said. "Things I'll probably never do again when I leave the Army."

do again when I leave the Army."

And things that the NEA says it wants to keep and share with other Americans and future generations.

Blast near Moscow subway kills at least 10, official says

BY STEVE GUTTERMAN The Associated Press

MOSCOW - A female suicide bomber blew herself up outside a busy Moscow subway station Tuesday night, killing 10 people and injuring more than 50, officials said.

The blast estimated at 2.2 pounds of TNT, took place almost exactly a week after two Russian planes crashed within minutes of each other in what officials say were terrorist bombings.

The blast hit in an area between the Rizhskaya subway sta-tion in northern Moscow and a nearby supermarket-department store complex.

Initial casualty reports varied, out police spokesman Valery Gribakin said on Russian televi sion that six people were killed and more than 20 wounded

The blast - which some witnesses said consisted of two separate explosions - hit one week, almost to the hour, after two Russian airliners crashed within minutes of each other. The crashes that killed 90 people in all were declared terrorist acts after officials reported finding traces of explosives in the wreckage

Russian news agencies cited the security agency as saying the blast was caused by a female sui-

monitored in Cairo published a statement claiming responsibility for the bombing on behalf of the "Islambouli Brigades," a group that also claimed responsibility for the airliner crashes. The ve racity of the statements could not immediately be confirmed

The statement said Tuesday's bombing was a blow to Russian President Vladimir Putin "who slaughtered Muslims time and again." Putin has firmly refused to negotiate with the rebels in predominantly Muslim Chechnya, saving they must be wiped out.

A score of emergency vehicles, their lights flashing, and several dozen police cars clustered at the scene about an hour after the blast. The gutted, flame-blackened car stood near the store, and a mangled body lay under a cover on a nearby stairway.

"There was a powerful blast and then a smaller one. I thought my roof would come off," said 30-year-old Sergei Pyslaru, who said he was driving on a nearby street at the time of the explosion Anatoly Zuvey. Moscow's chief

Milosevic begins defense at war crimes trial

Ex-Yugoslav leader faces 66 counts for allgedly starting three wars

BY ANTHONY DEUTSCH The Associated Press

THE HAGUE Netherlands -More than two years after his trial opened, Slobodan Milosevic launched his defense against war crimes charges Tuesday, insisting the Serbs he led with an iron fist were the victims instead of the aggressors in wars that tore apart Yugoslavia and destroyed millions of lives.

Milosevic began the second half of the most important war crimes trial since World War II by delivering the opening state ment in his own defense. He said Serbia's actions were a response to rebellions by other ethnic groups and outside threats by Is-lamic radicals who piggybacked on Yugoslavia's tensions to foment mayhem in the Balkans.

Calling the prosecution's case distortion of history Milosevic portrayed the Serbs as victims of a plan supported by the United States and Europe to break up Yugoslavia, of an attempt to wipe out Croatia's Serb minority, and of a Saudi-financed plot to create an Islamic state in Milosevic, seated alone at the defense table, sometimes turned red in the face as he rushed to complete his opening statement in the allotted time.

The panel of three U.N judges granted him an extra 90 minutes to finish summarizing his case after he complained he was given four hours while prosecutors took three days to present their case when the trial began in February 2002

The judges placed the opening of the defense at the top of Tues day's agenda, concerned that the case had repeatedly been delayed by Milosevic's frail health. Originally set for April, the defense case was postponed five times doctors determined Milosevic's blood pressure was dangerously high

Milosevic's health, and the possible appointment of a defense lawyer against his will may be discussed later, the judges ruled.

Milosevic, 63, faces 66 counts of war crimes for allegedly instigating three wars during the violent breakup of the Yugoslav federation in the 1990s when more than 200,000 people were killed.

Prosecutors say he was responsible for ethnic cleansing in the former republics to create a "greater Serbia" that united Serbs across Yugoslavia.

Milosevic said tens of thousands of Serbs were killed or driven from their homes in Croatia before the Yugoslav army respond-

"This is a classical example of an armed rebellion against a state," he said. "A state has the right to use all means necessary to control the rebellion

Later, Milosevic, said mujahadeen fighters flooded into Muslim-dominated Bosnia from Iran, Saudi Arabia, Afghanistan, Lebanon, and Morocco "to support the first Islamic state in Europe. The Afghans came with arms supplied by the U.S. intelligence agency, the CIA, Milosevic said.

Milosevic said the accusations against him were "an unscrupu-lous lie and also a treacherous distortion of history." He said he had defended his country against a conspiracy to "wipe out Serbia from the map of Europe," He charged that prosecutors had "presented everything in a lopsided manner" to fit their version of events

A main issue for the judges is whether the defense should be handed over to a court-appointed lawver to avoid more months of nostnonements and to keep the proceedings professional.

They also must decide whether his indictment - which covers alleged crimes committed during the wars in Croatia, Bosnia and Kosovo — should be broken into separate parts to speed up proceedings

Former Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic enters a court room in The Hague, Netherlands, on Tuesday. Milosevic opened his defense case at the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal Tuesday, starting the long-delayed second half of his trial on charges of genocide and other war crimes in the Balkans.

Five killed by Virginia floods

By LARRY O'DELL The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. - About 20 blocks of downtown Richmond were condemned after the remnants of Tropical Storm Gaston battered central Virginia with torrential rain Monday, causing heavy flooding that sent cars floating down streets and trapped people in buildings.

Representative abruptly retires

RICHMOND, Va. - U.S. Rep. Edward L Schrock abruptly announced Monday that he will not seek a third term in Congress, citing unspecified allegations that have "called into question" his ability to serve.

Although Schrock did not comment on why he decided against seeking re-election, several Virginia Republicans said allegations that Schrock is gay have roiled the party since they were posted on a Web log Aug. 19.

Schrock is married and a conservative who voted for legislation to ban gay marriages.

Schrock, 63, said in a five-paragraph state ment that allegations have surfaced in recent weeks "that have called into question my ability to represent the citizens of Virginia's Second Congressional District."

Fla. Supreme Court takes on brain-damaged woman case

The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — The Florida Supreme Court questioned lawyers Tuesday about the extent of the power handed to Gov. Jeb Bush under a law that let him order the reinsertion of a brain-damaged woman's feeding

In a crucial hearing in the closely watched right-to-die fight, Justice Charles Wells said he was troubled because he had to conclude the law was designed to sidestep a trial court ruling that found there was "clear and con-vincing evidence" Terri Schiavo would not want to be hooked up to the tube.

But Bush attorney Ken Connor said the court's order that the tube be removed was honored.

The fact that the tube was reinserted six days later by order of the governor last fall doesn't alter the removal order. Connor said.

The high court did not indicate when it would rule on the case. A lawyer for Schiavo's husband and guardian, Michael, has challenged the constitutionality of the law, which the Legislature passed last October and was in effect for just 15 days.

A trial judge in May ruled that the law violated Terri Schiavo's privacy rights and the separation of powers between all three branches of government. The governor appealed that ruling and the case was bumped immediately to Florida's high court.

Terri Schiavo, 40, suffered brain damage in 1990 when her heart stopped beating, a condition brought on by an eating disorder.

Small planets found

BY JOSEPH B. VERRENGIA

The Associated Press American astronomers

they have discovered the two smallest planets yet orbiting nearby stars, trumping a small planet discovery by European scientists five days ago.
All three of these smaller bodies belong to a new class of planets orbiting distant stars, the scientists said Tuesday. The planets are roughly the size of Neptune in our solar system and are 14 to 18 times the mass of Earth.

The two new planets were s ted by two separate teams of U.S. researchers. Scientists not in-volved in the projects lauded both, saying their planets should be recognized as the first discoveries of planets in this class rather than the Europeans who announced their planet last week. The dueling announcements reflects the intensity of the race to discover exoplanets, or planets or-biting stars other than our sun.

The big prize, of course, would be to find an Earth-sized planet capable of supporting life, but today's instruments cannot detect bodies that small.

Using an Olympics analogy, Carnegie Institution planetary theorist Alan Boss said the American groups have tied for first place and should share a gold

Boss noted the Americans' findings have been accepted for publication by international science journals, while the discovery led by a pair of prominent Swiss as tronomers still is being reviewed for publication. These two were submitted July and August, while the Swiss discovery is still in consideration," said Boss, who did not participate in any of the discoveries. 'On that basis." he said of the Europeans, "I would award them the bronze" medal. Over the past decade, astronomers have found as many as 135 planets orbiting various stars, but all of them are giant gas planets similar to Jupiter and Saturn.

One of the new planets, located by University of Texas at Austin astronomers, is orbiting very close to the star named 55 Cancri, which is about the same size as Sun and located light-years away.

The other new planet discovered by American scientists orbits a star called Gliese 436, that lies about 33 light-years from Earth in the direction of the constellation of Leo.

The Neptune-sized planet also hovers about 3 million miles from its star and whips around in its tight circular orbit once every 2.64 days.

It was discovered by premier planet-hunters Geoffrey Marcy of the University of California-Ber-keley and Paul Butler of the Carnegie Institution. Together, they have spotted about half of the known exoplanets.

SAT scores unchanged for 2004

BY JUSTIN POPE The Associated Press

SAT scores for the high school class of 2004 were mostly the same as a year ago, though scores for some minority groups showed an encouraging increase.

The average cumulative score on the country's most widely taken college entrance exam was 1026, the same as for the class of Scores on the verbal section rose one point to 508 while math scores fell one point to 518.

The stagnant scores were something of a disappointment following a six-point jump last year from 2002 that produced a 36-year high.

But The College Board, which owns the test and was releasing the scores Tuesday, said it was good news that more students are taking the test and signaling they hope to attend college, even if that may have weighed down average results.

There was also some consolation in improved scores for some minorities, who comprised a record 37 percent of the 1.4 million test-takers, also a record.

Students identifying themselves as Mexican American boosted their scores nine points to 909. Scores from those identifying themselves as Puerto Ricans were flat at 909 but students in the "other Hispanic" category increased their scores five points to 926. Nineteen percent of students did not respond to the question about their racial/ethnic identity.

Males scored 512 on the verbal section and 537 on math, identical to a year ago. Scores for females one point on verbal to 504 and fell two points on math to 501

The math and verbal sections of the SAT are each graded on a 200-800 point scale, though next spring the test expands to three sections - math, writing and critireading - which will make 2400 a perfect score instead of 1600. Members of the class of 2005 can take the old test one last

Despite changes in content The College Board says scores on the new critical reading and math sections will be comparable to scores on the current verbal and math sections. The writing section will include a timed essay time in the fall

SAT scores play a role in the admissions process at about 80 percent of the nation's colleges and universities without open admissions policies. However, most selective colleges also accept results from the ACT exam, which earlier this month reported a slight increase in cumulative scores for its class of '04.

SAT scores up over past decade

The average SAT math score has increased 14 points since 1994, and the verbal score rose for two consecutive years for the first time since 1996.

Smith resigns while fighting allegations

BY NATHANIEL HERNANDEZ The Associated Press

CHICAGO William Kennedy Smith said Monday he has resigned from the humanitarian group he founded while he fights sexual assault allegations leveled by a former employee.

"I am simply doing everything I can to protect the organization I love," Smith said in his first public appearance since Audra Soulias filed a lawsuit last week alleging he sexually assaulted her five

Smith, the nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, denied he assault-ed Soulias. He said friends worried that he would appear guilty by resigning from the Center for International Rehabilitation which helps victims of land

"The damage has been done but the truth will be sorted out. said Smith, a 43-year-old medical doctor who was cleared of rape charges in a separate case in Florida in 1991.

Soulias, 28, Smith's former personal assistant, is seeking at least $50,000 in damages, the minimum that such a court action must demand under Illinois law.

She claims that Smith bought her drinks while she was celebrating her birthday in January 1999 and that he later took her to his house, dragged her upstairs and sexually assaulted her.

Soulias continued to work for Smith until June 1999 and during that time had consensual sex with him on a number of occasions, according to her attorney, Kevin E.

Smith said he had a five-month relationship with Soulias in 1999

"It was in no way forced or coerced," he said. "I cannot dignify her allegations by repeating them, even to deny them, so all I can say is that they are false.

Farmers' Almanac: It'll be a wet, wild winter

BY DAVID SHARP The Associated Press

LEWISTON, Maine - Gas up the snowblower but don't put away your umbrella: The Farmers' Almanac is predicting a wild winter with heavy precipitation and dramatic temperature swings in the Northeast.

The northern Plains and Great Lakes will be snowy, the almanac says, while it will be milder in the southern half of the country.

The Northeast will have unusually wet weather - either as rain or snow, according to the almanac.

"The big thing is it's going to be a winter of extremes," said managing editor Sandi Duncan, whose al manac hits newsstands Tuesday

The weather formula used by the 188-year-old Farmers' Almanac is a closely guarded secret. Prepared two years in advance, the forecasts are based on sunspots, the position of the planets and tidal action of the moon.

The National Weather Service questions the accuracy of forecasts made so far in advance, but

Farmer creates cornfield maze of U.S. as teaching tool

The Associated Press

AUTAUGAVILLE, Ala. - Ted Johnson has cut a maze in the shape of the continental United States into a 12-acre cornfield on his farm, hoping to educate schoolchildren about America's geography and the role farming plays in modern life.

The Autauga County farmer has toyed with the idea of a cornfield maze for some time, but all the ones he had ever seen had a Halloween theme

"I wanted to make something where the children, and adults, too, could learn something," Johnson said. "I think people will enjoy this. I don't care who you are, or how much you think you know, you get in the middle of this thing and you can get lost oathways in the maze. In each of the 48 states is an area where a metal stake displays information about the state: a picture of its flag, the capital, its nickname, the state bird and the date it entered the union

Johnson, owner of River Bottom Farms and River Bottom Bed and Breakfast, used global positioning system coordinates and a lawn mower to lay out the pattern of the maze when the corn was about knee-high. He wasn't sure how good a job he'd done until a pilot friend flew overhead two weeks ago and took a picture.

Those entering the field get a copy of a U.S. map to help them navigate. The maze is open during the week to school groups and on the weekends for visitors.

GOP salutes Bush as wartime leader

The crowd holds signs in support of the troops during the Republican National Convention in New York, Monday,

By TOM RAIM The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Republicans are turning to conditions at home after saluting President Bush as a wartime president whose leadership is "rock solid." California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger gets star billing on the second day of the party's convention as the GOP extends its outreach to moderate Democrats and indepen-

But as the Republican National Convention headed for Tuesday's session at Madison Square Garden under extremely heavy security, Bush supporters scrambled to explain the president's day-old comments that the war against terror could not be won.

First lady Laura Bush, in a rare foray into foreign policy Tuesday, was to present her husband as a commanding warrior against terrorism in a prime-time conven-

In Monday's opening session, Republicans invoked the memory of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks the World Trade Center stood about four miles south of the Garden - as a test of Bush's mettle as a strong and decisive leader.

"Since September 11th President Bush has remained rock solid." former New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said, likening president to Winston Churchill and Ronald Reagan. "We need George Bush more than ever other politicians with broad popular support. On Monday, Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., drew enthusiastic cheers - and a standing ovation - when he voiced strong support for his 2000 GOP presidential rival. McCain heartily endorsed the president's Iraq and anti-terrorism policies, saying the United States had little choice but to invade Iraq.

"Don't let anyone tell you otherwise. Not our critics abroad. Not our political opponents. And certainly not a disingenuous film-maker," McCain said in a clear dig at filmmaker Michael Moore that delighted his audience. Moore's box-office hit, "Fahrenheit 9/11," sharply questions Bush's motives for invading Iraq.

Bush declares U.S. will win war on terrorism

By JENNIFER LOVEN The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - President Bush said Tuesday "we will win" the war on terror, seeking to quell controversy and Democratic criticism over his earlier remark that victory may not be nos-

In a speech to the national convention of the American Legion. Bush said, "We meet today in a time of war for our country, a war we did not start yet one that we will win '

That statement differed from Bush's earlier comment aired Monday in a pre-taped television interview, that "I don't think you can win" the war on terror. That had Democrats running for the cameras to criticize Bush for being defeatist and flip-flopping from previous predictions of victory.

'What if President Reagan had said that it may be difficult to win the war against communism? What if other presidents had said it'd be difficult to win the war the Cold War?" Democratic vice presidential candidate John Edwards said on ABC's "Nightline" program. "The war on terrorism is absolutely winnable."

Bush's comment - and the ensuing criticism - took attention away from the carefully crafted image of Bush being broadcast from the Republican National Convention in New York, as a decisive wartime commander in chief who is securing America's safety and sure of the course on which he has set the nation.

As Bush continued a pre-convention journey through one closely contested state after another, aides scrambled to clarify the president's remark and contain the story. And in Tuesday's speech before the American Legion, with popular Republican Sen. John McCain of Arizona by his side. Bush himself hit back.

"In this different kind of war, we may never sit down at a peace table. But make no mistake about it, we are winning and we will win." Bush said, pausing to grin slightly. "We will win by staying on the offensive, we will win by spreading liberty

The campaign of Democratic presidential challenger John Kerry merely nounced again.

'This president has gone from mission accomplished to mission miscalculated to mission impossi ble on the war on terror," Kerry spokesman Phil Singer said.

The president also appealed to a constituency so important in this election that Kerry is breaking with a tradition that the other side remains quiet during their opponent's convention and will speak to the American Legion meeting on Wednesday.

Bush cited increased funding for veterans programs that is bringing more health care to more people more quickly, focusing resources on the veterans who most need help, allowing veterans to receive both military retired pay and disability compensation, and providing additional housing

The Kerry campaign disputed that, saying Bush's budgets have fallen far short of what veterans need and promising that Kerry would reverse that.

Bush launched a fresh attack on Kerry, this one specailly tailored for the veterans audience. Bush derided his opponent for opposing his plan for a major troop realignment that would eventual ly bring about 70,000 American soldiers back to the United States.

Also Tuesday, Bush said on NBC's "Today" show that he will continue pursuing diplomatic rather than military options to try to get Iran to halt its nuclear pro-

Tuesday accused the GOP lead-ership of organizing a demonstration against candidate John Kerry's war record, calling "purple heart bandages" handed out by a convention delegate a slap at all veterans who have won the deco-

Republican Gillespie asked delegate Morton Blackwell of Arlington, Va., to quit handing out the bandages, which carried the message: "It was just a self-inflicted scratch, but you see I got a Purple Heart

The numle heart handages were visible on some delegates Monday afternoon but were not in evidence by Monday night when party members delivered the convention's first major speeches. Blackwell had distributed about 250 of the bandages

Kerry won three Purple Hearts, a Silver Star and a Bronze Star as a Navy lieutenant in Vietnam. Members of the group sponsoring television ads challenging his account of his wartime service contend Kerry's own fire caused the wound that led to his first medal. Navy records and other veterans don't support the charge.

"This symbol is a very moving one," Rangel said of the Purple Heart. "In many of the homes of the survivors that's all they have to remember their loved ones. some survivors can't see and some can't walk. All they ask is a little dignity."

Dems criticized GOP for mocking Kerry medals

Democrats had planned to shift their focus Tuesday to domestic politics until the publicity stunt lured them back to discussthe Vietnam War. The anti-Kerry veterans group has criticized Kerry for, among other things, earning Purple Hearts for superficial wounds that required no hospitalization. Retired Gen. Merrill McPeak. former chief of staff of the Air Force, said thousands of Purple Hearts have been awarded in Iraq and "the numbers will continue to accumulate.

"This is outrageous," McPeak said. "This isn't just a few foolish people. This had to be organized at the convention. It has to repre-sent an official view. We have to demand that the president himself denounce this."

Democrats eventually steered rapid-response briefing, given just blocks from the GOP convention, to domestic issues and criticism of President Bush's claims to be a compassionate conservative.

Reps. Ciro Rodriguez of Texas, Stephanie Tubbs Jones of Ohio and Greg Meeks of New York argued that the Bush domestic agenda has shown compassion only for big corporations, the wealthy and special interests

It's difficult to make the case that they're compassionate when the poverty rate has risen and energy costs and health care costs are continuing to go up," said Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack

9/11 looms large over Republican convention

Analvsis

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Republicans are holding their national convention at Madison Square Garden for one reason, and it is four miles away at Ground Zero.

For President Bush, the war on terrorism is the defining issue of his first term and, he hopes, the key to a second. There is no more compelling way to dramatize that than to rally his party in the city stricken hardest by terrorists on Sept. 11, 2001.

On the convention platform, on television talk shows, in every interview, Republican leaders repeat the theme that Bush is the essential leader against terror, stronger and more reliable in command than Democrat John Kerry.

That was the message sounded over and over Monday night, 10 subway stops from the World Trade Center, where terrorists flew jetliners into the towers that were signatures of the New York skyline, destroying them, killing more than 2,700 people and burning "9/11" into the American language.

"Nearly two years ago, with the city's fate still a question mark in many minds, our president decided that this convention would come to New York City," Mayor Michael Bloomberg said. "This was a show of faith that required courage and vision, one that all New Yorkers will not forget."

Courage and vision, perhaps, but also political calculation. For a president dedicated to the war on terror, there could be no better arena. When Bloomberg spoke of beginning construction of Freedom Tower as a memorial on the trade center site, he said 'tombstone' when he meant to say "cornerstone." A slip, but too close to true.

Two Sept. 11 widows and the brother of a victim told their personal stories to the Republicans, who then stood for a memorial moment, for a mournful singing of "Amazing Grace."

At this point in the campaign, the polls indicate that many more Americans trust Bush to lead there against terror than favor turning to Kerry on that issue. An ABC News-Washington Post survey published Monday put Bush's rating on that question at 56 percent, up 8 points in a month, Kerry's at 38 percent

That was on opening day of the New York convention spotlighting the issue.

There was an offstage campaign debate on the terror war after Bush said in an NBC interview that "I don't think we can win it," but that it must be fought without a hint of weakness that would be exploited by the enemy.

Kerry, in Nantucket, Mass, had a one-word answer when asked whether he could win the war on terror: "Absolutely." His vice-presidential nominee, Sen. John Edwards, said, "This is no time to deard defeat," and vowed that a Democratic administration would destroy terrorism while restoring U.S. aliances against the threat.

Brush's sondersoms said the president was talking about winning the terror war "in the conventional sense," when this is an unconventional struggle in which there will be no formal surrender to signal victory.

The Republicans are bent on taking full command in a debate that will run throughout the campaign. Bush came to New York on Sept. 14, 2001, "faced with the worst crisis in our history," former New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani told the convention.

"For ... his determined effort to defeat global terrorism, no matter what happens in this election, President George W. Bush already has earned a place in our history as a great American president," Giuliani said. "We need George Bush now more than eyer."

In his convention speech, Giuliani repeated the words "September 11" 11 times. In case anyone was missing the message.

Sen. John McCain of Arizona said it five times more in his talk, as he spoke of watching Bush stand in the ruins three years ago "promising to right this terrible wrong and to stand up and fight for the values we hold dear."

"He promised our enemies would soon hear from us," McCain said.

At the Democratic convention in Boston, New York Attorney General Eliot Spitzer said the Republicans should not be allowed to claim Sept. 11 as their issue. "I say this to the Republican Party: With all respect and all deference, do not dare use 9/11 for political purposes."

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Protesters in 5100 bills featuring a sneering Vice President Dick Cheney on Tuesday as activists predicted an aggressive day of sit-ins, street theater and even vandalism aimed at corporations with ties to the Bush family and the GOP.

Outside the midtown hotel where Texas delegates to the Ropublican National Convention are staying, about two dozen protest-ers calling themselves employees of "Hallibacon" grunted through plastic pig snouts on their faces and bathed themselves in the stacks of fake $1.00 bills.

The protesters accused Cheney and Halliburton, the company he once led, with profiting from the war in Iraq and its aftermath.

"We love money. We love war

Beer in aluminum bottles on the way

BY CHARLES SHEEHAN

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH - How much would you pay for a bottle of beer that stays cold nearly an hour longer? Pittsburgh Brewing Co., maker of Iron City Beer, is asking an additional $1 per case.

The brewery has partnered with Alcoa Inc., the world's largest aluminum maker, to produce aluminum bottles that keep beer colder for as much as 50 minutes longer, Alcoa officials said.

About 20,000 cases of the new aluminum bottle beer are en route to as many as 28 states and should be on shelves this week Alcoa and Pittsburgh Brewing said Tuesday.

The bottles have three times

the aluminum of a typical beer

That gives them superior insu-lation, Alcoa spokesman Kevin

Lowery said It's not the first time Alcoa has teamed up with the local brewer to put out a new product. In 1962 the two put the first pull-tab beer cans on shelves, freeing beer drinkers of the need to carry openers with them. 'We think it's much better than a can and as good or better than glass," said Joe Piccirilli, vice chairman for Pittsburgh Brewing. "There's no doubt in my mind that this has the same potential as the pull tab we did with Iron City wants to expand sales. But the aluminum bottle may be more important to Alcoa The aluminum giant wants to win back a share of the market it lost to beer bottles — both glass and plastic, which are now common at sporting events nationwide.

About 40 percent of all been consumed comes out of cans, 43 percent from bottles and 8 percent from the tap, according to the Beer Institute, which tracks industry trends. Bottles, however, have gained ground over the past decade.

Plastic bottles make up only 0.5 percent of all beer sales, accord-ing to the Beer Institute. But having aluminum bottles at sporting events would introduce the product to thousands, who might buy a case for home.

Pittsburgh Brewing said it von't drop glass bottles or cans from production. Some people say they can taste erence between beer in the diff cans and bottles.

Lew Bryson, an author of two books on breweries, said those complaints are psychological, since the aluminum is coated But, he said, there may be a lingering taste when the seal of an aluminum can is broken The aluminum bottle could eliminate that, he said. One microbrewery based in Missoula, Mont., has been using aluminum bottles. Heineken re-leased a limited edition aluminum bottle last year.

Aluminum bottles also have proven successful for a few breweries in Japan, but Iron City is the first company in North America to ship the bottles nationally, company officials said.

Cutting tools down to size

Q. I am new to computers and I have big problems. I've messed up my computer's monitor display settings until the box you use to change properties is huge and dis-appears off the bottom of the screen. It happened after I clicked on a choice called 3-D by mistake. The box where I need to repair this is so large that I cannot see the OK button at the bottom after I make the fix.

— Doris Lindsey A. Many folks get in trouble when they put the mouse arrow on the desktop and give a right-click to bring up the link to the Proper ties tool panel that handles stuff like screen res olution, colors dis-played, speed of the video card, size of icons and much else. Usually the problem hits when the user goes to the tab called Settings and changes the resolu tion so it is far smaller than the monitor can dis play. The result is that all the windows become too large to show on the monitor screen

You need to know that since you can see the top of the Properties box, you can fix it by giving a right-click at the top and then selecting the Move command this summons. With this selected, you can move the window up and down and back and forth using the cursor arrow keys. Punch the up arrow until that OK button appears and give it a click. If you cannot see the top of the display you can still activate the Move command by tapping Shift + Control + M (as in Move)

Now you can fix the problem by changing the settings your mis-cue ordered in the first place. Look for the slider bar in the center of the Settings tab in Properties. Use the mouse to drag it to the right until the resolution is at least 1,024 by 768. That will re-turn the display to where everything fits the monitor Q. I have a Dell Windows 98 machine and run SBC Yahoo DSL. As soon as I connect to the Internet, I start getting an error message "Iexpl ore - This program has performed an illegal operation and will be shut down." If I click on the details button it further states "IEXPLORE caused an invalid page fault in module unknown ...' This message will pop up every few minutes.

Additionally, if I do a Ctrl + Alt + Delete, the program box will show that this program is listed multiple times (up to 10 times). It slows the ma-chine down terribly, and eventually I reboot.

I've reloaded Internet Explorer 6.0 and have SpyBot run and Ad-aware software. Nothing seems to work. — Tom Woods, Frank-A Microsoft's Knowledge Base of fixes for various "issues" deals directly with this problem that af flicts Windows 98 and 95 only. It stems from a virus called Matrix that does its nasty stuff by corrupting the Windows Sockets, or Winsock, which is the essential file that Windows uses to link with the Web. The fix is to restore that Win-sock file (wsock32.dll) to its pris-tine state using the Windows System File Checker and then ex-tracting an unsullied copy from your Windows 98 CD-ROM

Put the CD in the drive tray click Start and Run, type in sfc and tan Enter.

Pick the Extract file choice that appears, then point the Browse box that appears to the CD drive and press Enter.

If you are asked to create a new folder for the operation, say Yes and the operating system will restore your Winsock and stop those nasty floods of Internet Explorer error messages.

Recruitment process honest

In reference to the Aug. 16 column ". but recruitment tactics downplay real dangers": Recruiting brochures are used to inspire qualified individuals to take an informed look at what the U.S. Army can offer them. These brochures are not used as a bait-and-switch tactic by any process. Brochures are an instrument of information for responsible individuals to consider their future in the Army

As far as the direction of use, there are specific brochures targeted to different ethnic groups for the sole purpose of iden-tifying their specific needs and interests. Brochures are produced in Spanish and English. When the columnist quotes from one of the brochures: "Here is a chance to become whatever you want to be," he is correct, provided you qualify and a vacancy exists.

Let's be honest, the Army is looking for highly motivated and dedicated individu-als to fill boots. It is an all-volunteer Army, and only the selected few will qualify for its 210 job offerings. Recruiting is not targeted to the less-fortunate who can't go to college. If the "less-fortunate" statement was true, how does one explain the commissioning of officers? The recruiting process is targeted to the se-lected few who want to defend the rights and interests of the United States and to protect those individuals in the United States who can't defend themselves. Take into consideration those individuals who want to jump out of airplanes and who want to be at the tip of the spear. Are they less fortunate than others?

The Army recruits just like any major company in the world. It looks for the most-qualified individuals and asks them to be part of the team. Anyone who honestly believes that an individual actually joins today's Army with the belief that he or she will not go to the Middle East is as ignorant as the columnist portrays himself to be.

Reality is this: The Army is a career of loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage.

Women know war's risk

In response to the writer of "Sending women to war wrong" (Aug. 15): I am a college-educated, 30-year-old American woman and an airman I am not at all confused about my role in the military.

From the moment I joined ROTC, and still had the option of walking away without any service commitment, I was taught the Code of Conduct. For those unfamiliar with it, Article One reads: "I am an American, fighting in the forces which guard my country and our way of life. I am prepared to give my life in their defense." It is not at all ambiguous or mis leading. It is crystal clear to me that my job may one day require me to lay down my life so that my American brothers and sisters can live in freedom.

I resent the assumption that I am too stupid to understand what being a soldier, sailor, airman or Marine means. Why don't you ask any servicewoman if she thought it was all about the free education and travel? Then ask the servicemen. You will find that 99 percent of us, men and women alike, are quite cognizant of our responsibilities as servicemembers and the risks our jobs entail.

I also resent the fact that you think my life is any more valuable than that of my brothers-in-arms. The men who give their lives for our country and our way of life are heroes. And so are the women who do the same.

Guardsmen eager to deploy

As a member of the Air National Guard for several years, I have seen many changes in the way that the Guard and Reserve are deployed. For example, there was a time many years ago that reservists begged for the chance to work closer with the active duty. Today, we have achieved that and so much more.

The Guard and Reserve have never resisted the chance to deploy and to work side by side with the active duty. In fact, during recent years there have been a great many who have chosen active-duty deployments over family and careers, resulting in divorce and financial hard-

But with that aside, we have always been there when the country called for us and that is a tradition that won't change. In peacetime, we are the community's professionals, and in time of crises, we are soldiers, sailors and airmen living up to the name "citizen soldiers.

During the course of this war, we also share the heartbreaking task of burving our own as well. We might be reservists and guardsmen, but even we are not immune to death. Please remember that the next time that someone says, "Oh they're just Guard and reservists.

Stop bullets before bad drivers

Here in Baghdad, Multi-National Corps raq has decided to establish a "law and order" function on Camp Victory. The 89th Military Police Brigade will provide law-and-order services to Camp Victory (and Camp Slayer as available). These services apparently will include speed enforcement and anti-drunken-driving patrols. The position of MNC-I is that the population of Camp Victory has created a situation in which this function is now required.

Although I don't have direct insight. I am not aware of any drunken-driving accidents or incidents, nor am I aware of any fatal accidents on Camp Victory that have been attributed to excessive speed. However, I am aware that convoys outside the perimeter get attacked all the time, the cities are dangerous and underpatrolled, and that coalition and civilian aircraft get shot at and occasionally hit while flying into the airport two miles away. As a pilot, this last item is of par ticular interest to me. I've been told it will take a "whole division" to make the airport safe, and that the Army is doing everything it can but that it doesn't have the mannower or the resources.

Hogwash! Instead of detailing troops to set up speed traps and conduct DUI checknoints attach them to the 1st Cavalry Division or 10th Mountain Division unit responsible for securing the ground around the airport. They'd be contributing a heck of a lot more to the war effort by probably saving a few lives and military/civilian aircraft, and contributing to the legitimacy of the Iraqi government by enabling a vibrant, visible and safe transportation system.

Who's prioritizing the tasks around here? When we look back in three years and wonder how we lost the war. I'm sure we won't blame it on a lack of speed traps and DUI checkpoints.

Give credit where due

I am deployed to Kuwait in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom within Navy Expeditionary Logistics Support Force - NA-VELSF, the Navy's combat cargo handling group. In the past several weeks, all of us have read story after story about the 2nd Infantry Division and other units, and their deployment and/or redeployment through the port of A'Shuaiba in Kuwait.

In every story, the Army is depicted as offloading and onloading all the equipment from the ships. In reality, NAVELSF and the Navy have loaded most everything that has embarked or disembarked from this port

We stand behind our Army brothers and sisters in everything that they do, and do not wish to deny them any coverage in Stars and Stripes paper. We do, however, wish that Stripes and the military community in general would recognize NAVELSF for the truly professional and efficient job that we The fact of the matter is, very little would make it to Iraq were it not for the ac-complishment of our mission.

OPINION

No sugar-coating the bad news on chocolate

BY STEVE ALMOND

n the beginning, there was candy. It was, well, fattening. It was intended to be fattening. That was the whole point of candy. Or actually, check that.
The whole point of candy was to give the mouth and body pleasure and, as an unfortunate-but-unavoidable byproduct, it was fat-

If you look at the history of candy (as I have done, somewhat obsessively), you will notice that confectioners and their consumers recognized these truths to be self-evident until about a decade ago.

This is when the oxymoronic concept of "diet candy" emerged.

Previously, the sugar-free stuff had been marketed primarily to diabetics. All of a sudden you had these perfectly innocent plea-sures, such as Red Vines and Mike & Ike, touting themselves as fat-free, along with a flood of faux candy bars advertised various ly as diet bars, protein bars, energy bars and

Candy was, for the first time in its long and sugared history, attempting to deny its very nature by being good for you.

In the next few weeks, this trend will reach its apotheosis with the nationwide introduction of a new line from Hershey called Carb Alternatives.

The industry giant (along with Mars and Nestle, Hershey dominates the $24 billion-a-year candy market) is hoping to cash in on the massive popularity of low-carb diets with slimmed-down versions of three popular products: Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, Kit Kat bars and Hershey's Kisses.

these products. They basically use artificial sweeteners to reduce the "sugar carbs" in each piece.

For the record, I've sampled all three They taste considerably better than most diet candy. (How's that for damning with faint praise?) But, to my tongue, they still came off as frauds.

Chocolate, after all, is nature's most distinctive flavor. It can't be faked, precisely because the tongue and taste buds interact with chocolate so intimately. We have come to expect that burst of creamy sweetness that only cocoa liquor, cocoa butter and sugar can provide.

One of the keynote speakers at [this year's All-Candy Expo in Chicago] was Dr. Barry Sears, author of the best-selling diet book "The Zone." Inviting Sears to address candy execs struck me as a little like inviting John Ashcroft to lecture the American Civil Liberties Union. But so be it. This is life in the At-

The truth is, the candy industry is facing an image crisis that cuts far deener than the current hysteria. With Newsweek slapping pictures of obese kids on its cover, and films such as "Super Size Me" taking aim at Ronald McDonald and friends, there's a disinct fear that Willy Wonka will come under

The British book "Chocolate Busters" has lobbed the first volley, portraying chocolate as only slightly less harmful than cigarettes and accusing confectioners of orchestrating an elaborate cover-up of their products' health risks.

It's true enough that chocolate, like any other luxury item, is the byproduct of horrendous global inequalities. But the notion that willing consumers of candy should be cast as victims is laughable. The real problem is that our citizenry eats too much and does too little exercise. We move, in essence, from the cubicle to the car seat.

And our consumption of candy isn't just excessive: it's neurotic.

Rather than eating candy in moderate amounts and relishing the experience, we stuff our faces in a guilty frenzy, to quell loneliness and self-doubt. The sad irony of the low-carb movement is that it will only feed this cycle. People will wind un eating more of this low-taste crud -"Hey, honey, it's only got one gram of sugar - and giving themselves far less pleasure.

How very American

Steve Almond is the author of "Candyfreak: A Journey Through the Chocolate Underbelly of America." This column first appeared in the Los Angeles Times.

Current candidates comfortable with using past icons his is the season of the dead presidents. It is the time in the election campaign when both parties lean heaviest on their icons, drawing comparisons between their man and the one who in the years since his demise has become Dan Thomasson identified with enviable qualities weren't recog recognized when he was alive For most of the last century, Republicans pointed to their first president, Abraham Lincoln, as the inspiration. Democrats, on the other hand, called on the ghosts of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman for inspiration. Now it seems to be Ronald Reagan who in death, has inherited the place of distinction with the Republicans, and John F. Kennedy who has displaced Roosevelt and Truman, relegating lesser lights such as Jimmy Carter and Bill Clinton to more minor positions in the comparison business.

Reagan's stature in the presidential firmament has climbed steadily, partially with the publication of his private letters and position papers that clearly show he wasn't quite the boob that the liberals liked to label (or, for that matter, libel) him. That even makes him much more acceptable to intellectual independents and moderates, who were inclined at times to dismiss him as merely a second-rate actor who was playing his best role

So when Ken Mehlman, George W. Bush's campaign manager, went before the hugely important Ohio delegation to the GOP convention, he invoked the name of the now saintly Reagan several times. Most impor-tantly he told them that once every 20 years voters just didn't make a choice for presi dent but cast their ballots for one who had the vision to dramatically change the history of the world for the better. The implication was clear: Reagan ended the Cold War and George W. Bush has the vision and strength to overcome the terrorists, both independents and state-sanctioned.

To this, one is tempted to reply that, "I knew Ronald Reagan, and George W. Bush is no Ronald Reagan." But then that would be impolite, not to mention trite

But it isn't only Reagan's willingness to take on evil empires that is now being at-tached to the current president by White House political guru Karl Rove and Mehlman and their henchmen. His tax-cut policies also come up for comparison to E It's the economy — decline in jobs specifically — that is threatening to undercut the president in the once-impregnable GOP stronghold of Ohio. It is for that reason that all the party's and Bush campaign's heavy artillery has been trained here on a state delegation that in the past would have been taken for vored, and one would have had to been hearing- and sight-impaired (in other words deaf and blind) not to have seen the comparison between the World War II Swift boat hero from Massachusetts and the Vietnam Swift boat hero from Massachusetts (and not just because they have the same initials) during the Democratic version of what is going on here. This, of course, once again prompts one to venture to John Kerry that, "I knew John Kennedy, and you're no John Kennedy." But once again, that would be impolite and trite.

There is one difference in the party's use of icons. The Democrats' reference to Kennedy are pretty much limited to his wartime heroism, just as the recital of Kerry achievements was pretty much limited to the four months he spent in Vietnam with his 20 years in the Senate all but ignored in the recitation of achievements. That is because neither Kennedy nor Kerry distinguished themselves on Capitol Hill. In fact, a good comparison would be the large number of votes they both missed while campaigning? In the history of dead presidents, the modern record of campaign mentions belongs to a Republican who is not among those who have been cited here. The champi-on in this category is Herbert Hoover, the brilliant humanitarian and engineer whose name has become synonymous with the Great Depression. Ironically, he has earned the distinction of most remembered through the Democrats, who have been running against him ever since, invoking his name in derision at every opportunity.

Crime families

NEW YORK — An 18-month investigation called "Operation Family Affair" led to the arrests of 69 people on charges that they took part in a major drug trafficking operation that used children as lookouts and runners, prosecutors said.

Many of the suspects have family ties, prosecutors said Five crews agreed on territory within the Remeeder, Unity and Long Island Baptist housing projects in East New York and sold about $11 million yearly in crack

VA FREDERICKSBURG — Virginia Railway Express trains are expected to be safer for commuters beginning this week when authorities begin using dogs trained to sniff out explosives for random searches of the rail cars.

The dogs and their handlers, which were to start the searches Monday, have been made available free of charge by a variety of local, state and federal agencies, including the FBI and U.S. Customs Border Protection. VRE spokesman Mark Roeber said.

Tollway overhaul

CHICAGO — Gov. Rod Blagojevich proposed a 10-year, $5.3 million overhaul of the state's tollway system that would eliminate congested toll plazas and rebuild 274 miles of roads

The plan would also increase the rates for truckers and drivers not using an electronic I-PASS. The tollway authority is expected to vote on the plan next month. Toll increases could take effect as early as Jan. 1

Digging history

NV RENO — Digging for a train trench in downtown Reno unearthed a prehistoric site that researchers say may be 4,000 years old.

About 80 sites were found under different layers of soil at the same spot. Researchers believe frequent flooding probably covered encampments used by prehistoric people close to the Truckee River

AR JONESBORO — Joshua Pfeifer, who's accused of beating his 11-week-old son, allegedly told authorities that he killed his 5-week-old daughter in Ohio in 1998, officials said.

Pfeifer, 28, is being held in lieu of a $750,000 bond.

He was arrested after hospital officials alerted police.

A very useful gift

PA YORK — York, a city struggling with its finances, has received a most practical gift.

An unknown donor dropped off a case of toilet paper at City Hall on Sunday. The gesture was in response to a recent comment made by York Councilman Wm. Lee Smallwood, who wondered how the cash-strapped city would close a $25 million deficit in the police and fire pensions.

"We can't even afford toilet paper," Smallwood said. Mayor John Brenner said the toilet paper was left at City Hall with a note from "a friend."

"It is amazing someone took it "It is amazing someone took in upon themselves to turn this into a practical joke," the mayor said Monday. The toilet paper was given to the public works department to be doled out, he said.

"What do you think we are going to do with it - decorate the trees? Of course we will use it," Brenner said.

Smallwood said it was comforting the public is paying attention to the city's problems. "They are just trying to help out." he said.

Meth lab busts

MO JEFFERSON CITY — Through the first half of 2004, state law officers have seized 1.460 meth labs, the Missouri State Highway Patrol said.

That's slightly behind last year's midway mark of 1,655 meth lab seizures but still roughly on pace to meet or exceed the 2003 total of 2.860 the natrol said Missouri has led the USA in meth lab seizures each year since 2001.

The Boston Police Department stockpiled $160,000 worth of weapons for the four day event, including stun grenades, projectile launchers, rubber bullets, pepper spray and tear gas. But they made iust five convention-related arrests during the four-day event in July and dealt with one minor scuffle be tween officers and protesters.

Boston police spokeswoman Beverly Ford told the Boston Herald that the weapons will be used for training. "They are not going to sit on the shelf and expire," she said.

Politicians needed

VA GORDONSVILLE — Voters casting ballots in the Nov. 2 town elections should bring pencils.

The mayor and three Town Council incumbents whose seats are up for election are calling it quits. Only former Orange County Supervisor Rick Wilkinson has qualified to run for one of the three council seats.

That means write-in votes will determine the other two

The situation promises to get even more confusing because of incumbent Mayor Ernest Duncan's decision not to seek re-election.

Councilmen Bob Coiner and Steve Irving, whose terms run through 2006, are running to replace him. The winner's seat on the council will have to be filled through an appointment.

Recovery house zoning

BURLINGTON — A home for recovering alcoholics and drug addicts is in violation of Burlington's zoning ordinance and has not corrected several code violations discovered during a May inspection by the city Code Enforcement Office.

The findings were described in documents released Thursday by the office, which gave owner Jodie Casarico until Aug. 24 to stop using the two-story frame house as "a boarding house."

Casarico said that she is "still contemplating what our decision will be" in light of the city's decision.

She said in May that she wanted to place 12 men in the house at a rent of $85 a week. In early August, six men were living there.

Snow is no drought fix

DENVER — August snows closed two scenic mountain roads and dusted the high peaks with powder, but the early storm doesn't necessarily signal that Colorado is in for a drought-busting winter.

It's too early to say whether the rainy summer across most of eastern Colorado will turn into a snowy winter and break a five-year dry spell, climate experts said.

Melting snow provides about 80 percent of the water in Colorado's rivers and lakes.

Rain has been above average in many parts of eastern Colorado this summer, but the western part of the state is still dry and precipitation remains about an inch below normal there, State Climatologist Roger Pielke Sr. said.

Iraq game axed

WILDWOOD — A board-walk game called "Wack the Iraq" that drew protest from a civil rights group will close after Labor Day weekend and will be renamed next year, city officials said Friday.

The game, at Morey's Pier here in this oceanfront town, lets customers shoot paintballs at people dressed as Saddam Hussein and Osama bin Laden.

The New Jersey Chapter of American Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee said the game fostered anti-Arab sentiment.

City Commissioner Fred G. Wager said the game will be shut down four or five days after Labor Day. The arcade remains open until mid-October, he said.

Drive-by porn

KANSAS CITY — The owners of a strip club and a company that operates adult bookstores have sued the state of Missouri over a new law banning sexually oriented billboards near state highways.

The law took effect Saturday, a day after a federal lawsuit was filed by two companies who operate adult businesses along Interstate 70.

The law bans businesses whose sexually oriented materials comprise 10 percent or more of their display space from putting up billboard advertising within a mile of a state hishway.

Gainey, who was sentenced Friday, pleaded guilty in June to misdemeanor public display of sexual material.

TAMPA — A police officer who mouthed off while picking up his uniform at the cleaners has been indicted on a charge of threatening President Bush for allegedly saying he would shoot him and his father if someone gave him the bullets.

Joseph Mazagwu, 35, surrendered Friday on charges of threatening the president and lying to investigators. The rookie officer has been suspended from the force and could lose his job.

If convicted, he faces up to five years in prison. He had no comment after his first court appearance and was released on $25,000 bail. The prosecutor said there was no evidence Mazagwu pursued the threat.

'Major Dad' star has cancer surgery

LOS ANGELES - "Major Dad" actor Gerald McRaney underwent surgery Monday in Houston to remove a cancerous growth from his lung, his Los Angeles publicist told The Associated Press.

McRaney, 56, is a longtime smoker. "I'm sure that he will plan to quit." his spokesman Henri Bollinger said. Although McRaney played the no-nonsense military man on the long-running sitcom "Major Dad," he is expected to begin work next week on "Commando Nanny," a new TV series in which he co-stars as a Beverly Hills tycoon who hires a British special-forces commando to baby-sit his three children.

California motorists cruise Coachella Valley desert streets named Gerald Ford Drive, Ginger Rogers Road, Dinah Shore Drive, Gene Autry Trail, Frank Sinatra Drive and Bob Hope Drive.

Now, there's Kirk Douglas Way near Palm Springs International Airport.

The city will rename Airport Road in honor of the film legend, a Palm Springs resident for more than a half-century. The renaming ceremony takes place Oct. 17, assistant city manager Troy Butzlaff said Thursday.

"One time he was offered to have a street named after him in Rancho Mirage," said his son Joel Douglas, who lives in Palm Springs. "He responded, 'No, I live in Palm Springs. Palm Springs is my home.'"

The younger Douglas has been trying to get a street named after his father, now 87, for some time. "My dad told me to forget [it], but I couldn't forget it,"

Joel Douglas said.

Douglas was nominated for three Oscars — for his roles in 1949's "Champion," 1952's "The Bad and the Beautiful" and 1956's "Lust for Life." He received the American Film Institute's Lifetime Achievement Award in 1991, as well as an honorary Oscar in 1996

He was impressed enough to invite Goodwin to perform it with him in Los Angeles in May.

Nelson and Goodwin recorded "Crazy" as a duet for Goodwin's debut album, to be released in October. And they'll sing it together at the annual Farm Aid concert on Sept. 18 near Seattle.

"Many females have sung 'Crazy,' but Carly's right up there with Patsy," Nelson said. Goodwin, 23, says the experience fulfilled a dream.

"I made a list of goals and put it on my wall, and singing a duet with Willie Nelson was one of them," Goodwin said

So many wonderful images from this summer's Olympics in Greece: Swimmer Michael Phelps' omnipresent perch on the medals platform; Aussie Ian Thorpe in his black bodysuit coming on like a shark against other swimmers; Natalie Coughlin's beaming face as a member of the U.S. women's record-breaking 800-meter freestyle relay; cute-as-a-button American gymnast Carly Patterson dashing the rail-thin Russian's hopes for Olympic gold.

But one image kept replaying itself. There's 6-foot-4 Phelps, the games' most hyped swimmer, standing at the block before each race with big, black headphones plastered to his head. He's winning gold, we thought, so what's he listening to that gets him so pumped up?

Of course, all that training, determination, body build and skill are responsible for turning the 19-year-old Maryland native into one of the greatest swimmers in history, but music can psych an athlete up to perform harder and faster.

For Phelps, rapper Eminem's "Til I Collapse" gave him the juice to snag his first gold medal of these Olympics in the 400-meter individual medley. His other favorites, according to NBC Olympics.Com, include Usher's "Burn." OutKast's "Roses" and Twista's "Overnight Celebrity."

The overwhelming favorites among the Olympics' athletes mirror the contemporary music charts; hip-hop and rock dominate.

Naturally, both genres get by on a big beat, perfect for generating aggres sion. One wouldn't imagine classical or New Age music lighting anyone's Given that Phelps and many of these athletes came of age in the hip-hop era, it's hardly surprising that hip-hop is the music of choice for stars such as gymnast Paul Hamm and his twin Morgan, Patterson, swimmers Kaitlin Sandeno and Maritza Correia, runner Monique Henderson and hurdler Lashinda Demus.

Letters from secret love a problem JUMB

Dear Abby: My problem concerns what to do with a group of snapshots and a bundle of about 100 old love letters that I've hidden for more than 50 years. If they are found after my death, my heirs will be shocked I have treasured these memen tos in my heart since I received the first, before I was shipped overseas in World War II. The letters continued up to December 1947 — and in '98 and '99 I received three more that were ultra-special

Family interference separated us, even as we were planning to be married. Of course, life went on. I met my wife and we were married a few years later, but I could never bring myself to destroy the letters or the photographs

After half a century, I searched and found my first love Then in 1999 we were able to locate our son, who was born and placed for adoption after we were separated. The three of us have spent some special time together. Even though we acwledged that our love was and still is true, we agreed not to upset my marriage My wife knows all about this and accepts my strong need to financially help my "other girl" have a comfortable lifestyle. They repre-sent an important part of my life with my first love. I cannot find the courage to let them go.

Have I done wrong?

— In Love With Two Exceptional Women Dear in Love: Not from my perspective. This is the 21st century not the 1940s. Perhaps it's time to let vour children know about their half-broth er. After all, this happened before you even met your wife An alternative would be to put the keepsakes in a safe deposit box and give one of the keys to your lawyer, with instructions to mail them to your love child after your death. I'm sure your son would treasure having evidence of the love through which he was

Dear Abby: Seven years ago, my husband's "Aunt Selma" lent us $2,000 on our first home. We set up a payment plan and paid her faithfully.

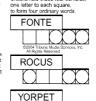

A year later, our first child was born with a heart condition. Aunt Selma came to us and demanded that instead of paying her, we put the money toward the enormous hospital bills.

Now she wants us to pay back the rest of the money. After all this time, I don't feel that's fair. This is causing a lot of stress in our marriage. Please help.

— Indignant in Indiana Dear Indignant: Please don't repay her generosity by withholding her money. She may be asking for it because she needs it now. So reinstate the payment plan and give her what she's due — and I don't mean just the money. Letters for this column — with your name and phone number — should be addressed to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles CA 90069. Readers can writ to Abby on the Internet at http://www.uexpress.com/dearabby Universal Press Syndicate

Teen son's attire gives wrong idea

Dear Annie: I am a married woman with a great husband and wonderful kids. The only problem is my older son. 'Mark," who is 15 years old and dresses like a freak. He has long. dyed-black hair, and his usual garb consists of black clothing, black boots and eyeliner. When neonle see him in nublic they get the wrong idea. He really is a great kid loving, kind and a terrific stu-

I've talked nicely with Mark about changing the way he looks but he feels if people cannot accept how he dresses, it's their own fault

Truthfully, his attire doesn't bother me or my husband. We are glad he expresses his individ-uality. But we fear people will think poorly of him, or he could be picked on or beaten up by other kids.

Kids who dress like mine should be treated with the same dignity and respect as anyone else, but it doesn't always hap

Annie's Mailbox pen. How can I help him?

Afraid in Florida Dear Afraid: Your son is fine. As long as he understands that his appearance can put people off, create per-sonal problems with others and limit his ability to find a job in the future, you've done what you can. The more pressure you put on him now, the less likely he is to listen. When the negatives become more impor-tant than the positives, he'll dress differently.

Dear Annie: In January, my best friend, "Julie," asked if I would like to go on a vacation with her and her family. She said she was renting a six-bedroom beach house for a week and would rent out rooms for $600 each. I agreed to rent a room for my family and gave her a deposit of $150

Three months later, I realized the vacation was going to be too costly, and I told Julie I would have to cancel and she could rent my room to someone else. She told me I had entered into a legally binding agreement and am still responsible for the bal-ance. She said it's not her fault we don't have the money. Plus, she's having a hard time finding people to rent the other rooms

she reserved

I gave her five months' notice. Confused in California Dear Confused: There actually may be some legal liability here. If during the five months, Julie made every effort to find new renters and could not, it's possible you owe her the balance Check with an attorney before assuming that Julie simply is being difficult. Then you might want to re-evaluate a friendship where Julie doesn't first suggest a compromise before implying that she can take you to court. Mathis, Howard back on U.S. roster

BY RONALD BLUM The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Midfielder Clint Mathis and goalkeeper Tim Howard are back on the U.S. ros-ter for World Cup qualifiers against El Salvador and Panama. Mathis, a spark for the Americans during the 2002 Men's World Cup, iniured an ankle soccer in June and didn't until last weekend for Hannover, his club in Germany. Howard, who starts Manchester United, has a slight injury and is questionable for the game, U.S. coach Bruce Arena said Monday. He is joined on the roster by Tottenham Hotspur's Kasey Keller, who started against Jamaica, and Jonny Walker of the MetroStars. Brad Friedel, who starts for Blackburn in England. is still not completely injury free. Arena said.

The Americans, who opened the semifinals with a 1-1 tie at Jamaica on Aug. 18, face El Salvador on Saturday at Foxboro, Mass., then play at Panama the following Wednesday. Midfielders Chris Armas, who is injured, and Earnie Stewart are the only players missing from the lineup that started at Jamaica, where the U.S. team rallied with an 89th-minute goal by Brian Ching.

"There's no magic to what I'm saying here: Obviously an important part of qualifying is getting as many points as possible at home." Arena said. "It's very critical that we get the three points on Saturday if we want to be success-

El Salvador, which opened with a 2-1 victory at home against Panama, plays host to the Americans on Oct. 9. The U.S. team closes against Panama at Washington on Oct 13 and Jamaica on Nov 17 at Columbus Ohio

Against Jamaica, players arrived at training camp on a Sunday night, then traveled to Jamai-ca on Tuesday. They will have five days of practice together before the opener of these two

"I don't mind the double dates," Arena said. "The ones I do mind are when we have the 48 hours, like we did against Jamaica."

Ten players are from Major League Soccer, while seven play in England, three in Germany, one each in Belgium, the Netherlands and France. Eleven are under age 25, including defender Oguchi Onyewu of Standard Liege, who has never played with the national team.

Serena cruises in first match in $4\frac{1}{2}$ weeks: Martin retires

BY HOWARD FENDRICH The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Dressed for a night on the town, Serena Williams was all business in her first match in 41/2 weeks.

Williams strode into Arthur Ashe Stadium wearing knee-high black boots, a pleated denim mini-skirt, a studded black tank top and dangling earrings. A far cry from the attire of days gone by, to be sure, but then again, Williams powerful strokes bear little resemblance to the way the women's be played. Show-ing little US OPEN sign of her injury-induced lavoff, the two-time U.S. Open champion advanced to the second round with ease, overwhelming Sandra Kleinova of the Czech Republic 6-1, 6-3 Monday. "I performed at a decent level today. I'm finally getting to a point where I'm actually playing better and focusing better," Williams said.

few moments later, asked who her biggest threat in the tour-nament is, Williams replied: "My-self. I can make it or break it."

She might have been dressed for a cocktail party or MTV's Video Music Awards, which she attended last year while skipping the Open shortly after left knee surgery. Her play Monday was definitely Grand Slam-caliber, though, a step above what fellow major champions Jennifer Capriati, Roger Federer and Carlos Moya showed in shaky victories earlier on Day 1.

At night, 1999 Open runner-up Todd Martin lost the final match of his career, announcing his retirement after being beaten by No. 31 Fabrice Santoro 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.7-5

One man in the draw is older than Martin, by mere months: Andre Agassi, 34, who followed Williams on center court and beat Robby Ginepri 7-6 (5), 6-4, 6-2. Agassi is the last of his genera-tion, now that Martin joined Pete Sampras, Michael Chang and Jim Courier in retirement.

"In some respects, you miss ev-eryone you grew up with," Agassi said. "You do."

In early matches on Tuesday, Justine Henin-Hardenne began defense of her title by defeating 15-year-old qualifier Nicole Vaidisova 6-1, 6-4. But winning the first set in 17 minutes, He-nine-Hardenne was broken twice, made several unforced errors and fell behind 1-4 in the second set.

Also on Tuesday's schedule were French Open champion Anastasia Myskina, seeded No. 4.

Serena Williams, who beat Sandra Kleinova 6-1, 6-3 on Monday, shows a different look during her warm-up in the U.S. Open. Tournament officials did not allow her to play a match with the knee-high boots.

former U.S. Open champion Lindsay Davenport, seeded No. 5, and No. 11 Venus Williams.

Defending men's champion Andy Roddick, seeded No. 2, headlines the evening program. Also, Wimbledon champion Maria Sharapova, seeded No. 7, plays Laura Granville.

Williams said her choice of denim was inspired by Agassi, who wore shorts made of that material back in the early 1990s That was when Agassi was Mr. "Image is Everything." These days, he's more "Father Knows Best," playing a limited schedule now that he and wife Steffi Graf have two children

"I managed to fight hard in a lot of those rallies and won the crucial points," Agassi said.

There weren't many crucial points for Williams, who finished with a remarkable 35-3 edge in winners and saved the only break point she faced with one of her seven aces.

"Her serving was pretty good. If she places it really well, like she did tonight, it's hard to return even for guys," Kleinova said. Capriati. Federer and Mova barely played well enough to advance. Mario Ancic and Karolina Sprem, who marked themselves as stars-to-be at Wimbledon, were one-and-done in the Open.

Frustrated by a strong breeze, her opponent's superb play and her own miscues, Capriati trailed 54th-ranked Denise Chladkova by a set, then put together a 2-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory

Federer struggled, too, but got past 2002 French Open champion Albert Costa 7-5, 6-2, 6-4 Third-seeded Moya had his problems against 19-year-old Brian Baker but prevailed 6-7 (6), 6-4. 6-4, 6-2 after Baker was hit by what he called "nervous cramps

Sprem, meanwhile, looked lit-tle like the player who upset Venus Williams en route to the quarterfinals at the All England Club: The 18th-seeded Croatian lost to countrywoman Jelena Kostanic 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. And No. 27 Ancic, also from Croatia, was beaten by Olivier Rochus of Belgium 7-5, 6-2, 7-6 (2). Ancic appeared to make a career-changing breakthrough by reaching the Wimbledon semifinals.

By Nicholas J. Cotsonika Detroit Free Press

DETROIT - Strange. Ironic. Maybe even sad.

Those are some ways to de-scribe the World Cup of Hockey, considering it's a joint venture of the NHL and NHL Players' Association — the same league and union engaged in a labor war threatening to shut down the upcoming season.

The NHL and NHLPA can't agree how to divide $2 billion in annual revenues, but they can stage an eight-team. trans-Atlantic tournament and then split the profits?

Then again, considering this tourna-U.S. vs. Russia Sept. 3 at St. Paul, Minn. that it might be the hest North American-style hockev there is, there are other ways to look at it. "This is going to be a wonderful tournament," U.S. coach Ron Wilson said. Hockey is back, but for how

The collective bargaining agreement between the NHL and NHLPA expires Sept. 15, and with the owners pushing for cost certainty and the players refusing to accept a salary cap, a lockout is expected. The situation is on everyone's mind - so much so that the Americans made a team rule hanning talk about it during the tournament — and the uncertainty might motivate the players.

"I think everybody wants to enjoy the time," U.S. center Mike Modano said. "Who knows Modano "Who knows when's the next time we're going to play?

Even if an agreement is reached and a lockout is averted, the NHL product, including the Stanley Cup playoffs, won't look like this

Yes, the Summer Olympics just ended, and football's just starting. But some of the best hockey has been played this time of year.

It all began with the 1972 Summit Series, which pitted Canada's NHI, stars against the Soviet national team. That landmark event will always be remembered for Paul Henderson's winning goal in the eighth and final game.

It continued with five Canada

Cup tournaments from 1976 to 1991, plus the Challenge Cup in 1979 and Rendez-Vous '87

The original purpose was to test North America's best against Europe's best, with so much talent otherwise hidden behind the Iron Curtain. But now that the Iron Curtain has come down, that the NHL includes stars from all over the world and that there is more parity among nations, the purpose is simply world-class competition

The World Cup was created in 1996, and NHL players went to the Winter Olympics in 1998 and 2002. The level of play was impres-sive in all three tournaments. But many people - North Americans, anyway preferred the World Cup. "I've never played

hockey like that," said U.S. center Doug Weight, who played in all three events. "I could do it every year.

In the Olympics, players show up in midseason form and put on an impressive show of skill. But they have virtually no time to prepare (one or two practices), bring the baggage of the season with them (slumps, injuries) and play international rules (bigger rink, no red line).

In the World Cup, players are rusty after a summer's rest. But they have 10 days of training camp with three exhibitions to prepare They're fresh and healthy. And they play by NHL rules. The smaller rink brings more of a physical element to the game.

Several stars, for various rea sons, have pulled out of this tournament. Still, it's billed as 'best-on-best.'

"It's totally different than any other thing," Wilson said. "The players aren't playing in this because it's just some summer fun tournament that you get yourself involved in. And they're not using this to get ready for the season They don't know if there's going to be a season. They want to win the World Cup.

'It's what you'd like to see in an All-Star Game. But you could never replicate that kind of intensity. When you represent your country, it just means something extra. It's hard to describe.

"I think if everything works out, this is almost the best hockey you can possibly imagine.

Hawaii QB Chang chasing NCAA career passing mark

Senior 2,218 yards behind Detmer's 13-year-old record

By JAYMES SONG

HONOLULU - Hawaii coach June Jones knew special things were in store for his football program when a lanky, baby-faced teenager first stepped onto the Manoa practice field in 2000 and completed eight straight passes.

Since then, Timmy Chang has thrown for 12,814 yards and 79 touchdowns and is closing in on becoming the most prolific passer in college history.

The senior quarterback needs 2,218 yards to break the 13-year-old NCAA career passing mark of 15.031 set by Brigham Young's Tv Detmer, who won the Heisman Trophy in 1990.

Chang, who is 1,030-for-1,834, is also on pace to break the NCAA marks in career completions (1 231) and pass attempts (1 883) held by Texas Tech's Kliff Kings With 67 interceptions thrown, Chang is on the verge of breaking Purdue quarterback Mark Herrmann's record of 73

Barring injury or any mental lapses that led to his benching last year, Chang — who averages 320.4 passing yards per game could surpass Detmer's record by midseason.

"I had envisioned this happening if he had stayed healthy," Jones said. "The first time I saw him in our training camp, I knew he would play as a freshman. And anybody that lines up and plays 12 games a year in this offense is going to have a shot at that

How they compare Pass Atter 15,031 332.76

If he does break Detmer's record, Chang said it is a reflection of all his coaches and teammates - past and present.

"Football is the biggest team game," he said. "You got 11 guys on the field that need to work together to accomplish one goal. It would be selfish to award myself. so I would never do that

Hawaii is touting Chang as a Heisman hopeful. He could have a big season, given that 10 offer sive starters are returning from last year's 9-5 squad, which was second in the nation in passing.

He has already set or tied 36 school records and eight Western Athletic Conference marks, Not bad considering he didn't play the sport until junior high school "Football wasn't a part of my childhood experience other than on the streets," Chang said. "I love basketball more than football, even now. But football was a tool for me to get ahead.

The youngest of three children, Chang said he focused on football to lessen his parents' financial burden of paying for a college education. He expects to graduate next spring with a liberal arts de-

Despite his lofty numbers, Chang has struggled with injuries and inconsistency

Last year, he was booed by the home crowd and benched late in the season for ineffectiveness. However, he came off the bench and threw for 475 yards and five touchdowns in a 54-48 triple-overtime victory over Houston in the Hawaii Bowl.

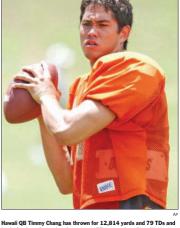

Chang said his most difficult time was when he suffered a season-ending wrist injury just three games into the 2001 season.

"That was my lowest point. It's hard when you train so hard and all of a sudden you're not able to play. I was hurt emotionally and physically," said Chang, who was granted a medical hardship by the WAC

"Going through adversity, being hurt, playing through inju ry, being booed, being disrespect-ed by your own home fans," has only helped. Chang said, "As they say, if it doesn't kill you, it will only make you stronger.' Jones said Chang, who was a star quarterback at his Honolulu high school, has to expect criticism wherever he plays.

"My feeling with quarterbacks is, you better get used to it," Jones said. "If you're under the center with any football team, you got to get the job done. We throw the ball, so just by nature there's a little more on you. But the bottom line is if you can't handle it, then vou can't handle it. He's been able to handle it.

The 6-foot-2, 194-pound Chang always had the athletic ability. but it was a just matter of maturing, his coach said. "He had to grow up a lot, which I think he has over the last 41/2 years." Jones said. Chang, 22, said he feels stronger "mentally, emotionally and physically," and teammates have noticed.

"He is so much more confident. knowing we all have his back,' cornerback Abraham Elimimian said. "No matter what, Timmy Chang is the man. He's the guy we're going to fight for. The bet ter he does, the better we're going to do. too.

Chang said he's not too worried about surpassing Detmer's record, pointing out it's not a given that he'll break it.

"I've learned over the years so many things can happen and noth-ing's a guarantee," he said. "What I've done is focused on the little things. The records and the success will come if you concentrate on the small things."

CB Rolle returns to anchor Hurricanes' defense

BY MARK LONG The Associated Press

CORAL GABLES. Fla Miami cornerback Antrel Rolle hopes a new conference will bring new challengers.

It would be a welcome change from the Big East, where teams rarely threw Rolle's way the past two seasons - and for good rea-

The 6-foot-1, 200-pound defender has become one of the nation's best cornerbacks. He has the size and strength to jam receivers at the line and the speed to run with them down the field. He could have left school early for the NFL but returned for his senior season and will anchor No. 6 Miami's revamped defense

He thinks the decision, coupled with the Hurricanes' move to the Atlantic Coast Conference, could give him more opportunities to make plays.

"Maybe teams will try me and feel they can get something my way," said Rolle, one of four returning starters on defense.

Miami senior CB Antrel Rolle hasn't allowed a receiver to catch a TD pass in his past 25 games.

"I hope so. Then I can prove them wrong."

Miami begins the season next Monday night against No. 5 Florida State at the Orange Bowl. It's the teams' third meeting in 11 months, so the Seminoles are well aware of Rolle's ability. When they played in January, P.K. Sam caught a 10-vard pass against Rolle on the Seminoles' first offensive play, then didn't have a reception the rest of the way.

Rolle was nearly as good gainst Pittsburgh's Fitzgerald last season, helping hold the nation's top receiver to three catches for 26 yards and a meaningless late touchdown. Rolle wasn't covering Fitzgerald on the scoring play

"People not only can't throw against him, but they almost refuse to throw his way because he's such a terrific lock-down corner." Miami coach Larry Coker said. "He's been almost unbeatable the last two seasons."

Rolle hasn't given up a touchdown since the 2002 opener against Florida A&M. a 25-game

The Hurricanes, meanwhile, haven't allowed a 100-yard receiver since Penn State's Bryant Johnson caught six passes for 149 vards and a touchdown in Miami's 33-7 opening victory in 2001. That's 37 games since a receiver eclipsed the century mark.

They led the nation in passing defense in 2001, ranked second in 2002 and were back on top last season when they gave up 143.5 vards a game

Some of that can be attributed to Rolle.

"Once he gets his hands on you it's pretty much over," teammate Kelly Jennings said. "That's the key to him. This year, everybody will see what he can do.'

Rolle played the past two sea sons in the shadow of safety Sean Taylor, an All-American who led the nation in 2003 with 10 interceptions. Rolle had two interceptions and seven pass breakups.

"I really don't know much about the ACC, but I'm looking for a tougher schedule and more competition." he said.

"I'm looking for more balls coming my way. I love challenges.

Rolle was arrested in July in the Miami neighborhood of Coconut Grove on two misdemeanor charges of resisting arrest and disorderly conduct and on a felony charge of battery on a law en-forcement officer. Not only was Rolle suspended from the team, but he had to face his father, the chief of police in Homestead. "There's not a single day that oes by that I don't think about " Rolle said.

'To be arrested and be in handcuffs in front of my father, that was a terrible experience for me. That's something I never want to face again."

Prosecutors chose not to file formal charges. The state attorney investigated the complaint and decided that the physical contact between Rolle and the officer was "merely incidental." Coker reinstated Rolle the same day.

"Someone's going to pay for it, and I know it's going to be the opponents on the other side of the field." Rolle said.

'They're going to pay for what I felt every single day. Someone's going to feel my hurt, someone's going to feel my pain

U.S. volleyball player charged with assault

ATHENS, Greece - Former Hawaii volleyball standout and U.S. Olympic team member Clay Stanley was charged with assault Monday, accused of hitting a pregnant woman during a scuffle.

Stanley, who played three sea-sons at Hawaii, lives in Greece and plays for a local team.

Stanley was taken before a judge, and requested and received two days to prepare his defense. He was ordered held pending the trial, which is scheduled Wednesday.

Stanley was at a nightclub with teammates after the closing ceremonies and has little or no recollection of the incident that led to his arrest, said relatives in Honolulu - including his father and stepfather — who have been in contact with Stanley's girlfriend in Athens

U.S. coach Doug Beal, who is with Stanley in Greece, said the player was "depressed." "It's hard to niece together what happened," Beal told the Honolulu Star-Bulletin by telephone from Athens. "I'm disappointed for Clay, embarrassed for him, USA Volleyball, the U.S. Olympic Committee and for me, personal-

'We will get Clay all the help that we possibly can. We will do everything possible to help him get through this. The charges are serious, the potential sentence is serious and Clay is well aware of how serious this is."

The U.S. team completed competition Sunday, losing the bronze medal match to Russia

Stanley had 10 kills and two aces in the loss and finished Olympic play seventh in points with 110 and second in aces with 17.

Stanley's father, Jon, played on the U.S. volleyball team in the 1968 Olympics. The Stanleys were the first father and son to compete in Olympic volleyball.

Jury selection continues in Bryant sex assault case

BY JON SARCHE The Associated Press

EAGLE, Colo. - Attorneys in the Kohe Bryant sexual assault case resumed closed-door questioning of prospective jurors Tues day, seeking out their attitudes about race, experiences with sexual assault and any effect pretrial publicity has had on them.

On a clear, crisp day in this mountain town, people arrived at the courthouse singly and in small groups, some carrying pink sheets of paper signifying their status as potential jurors. The first round of questioning on Monday took nearly 10 hours District Judge Terry Ruckrie gle rejected a media request for access Monday, saying he wanted candidates to feel they could answer questions about potentially embarrassing topics without scrutiny by the press Ruckriegle also said Bryant's right to a fair trial and the potential jurors' right to privacy outweigh "qualified" First Amendment rights of access

Bryant, 26, has pleaded not guilty to felony sexual assault, saying he had consensual sex with a then-19-year-old employee at a Vail-area resort where he stayed last summer. If convicted, the Los Angeles Lakers star faces four vears to life in prison or 20 years to life on probation, and a fine up to $750,000

Before the questioning began potential jurors filled out an questionnaire asking them their feelings about interracial relationships, whether they have had "any negative experi-ence with an African American" and whether they are biased against mental health professionals, among other things.

Trial consultant Howard Varinsky of Varinsky Associates said he believes the defense is particularly concerned with people's feelings on whether a defendant must prove he is innocent or whether he should be required to testify Prosecutors, he said, will be wary of people who have had negative experiences with law enforcement or the court system. "Both sides are looking for who to kick," he said.

charges have been filed," Pau-ley said. "This incident is under investigation. Police received the report at

Barkley was a nine-time All-Star and the league's MVP in 1993

He has been an analyst with cable network TNT since his retirement in 2000.

In fact, the questionnaire probably does not provide an accurate glimpse of arguments that will come up at trial, said Richard Gabriel, a Los Angeles-based trial consultant with Decision Analysis

'It probably has more to do with what one side anticipates the other side's themes and issues are going to be and wanting to clearly find out if people are going to be amenable to it." he

Also Monday, Denver television station KCNC released some details of the sealed, 150-person witness list. The station reported it included the alleged victim and her parents, along with some of acquaintances from Eagle and from the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley where she was a student until fall 2003.

Also on the list, the station said. were people from Calgary, Alberwhere the supermarket tab loid Globe published what it said were pictures of the alleged victim celebrating in a bar a few months after the alleged attack.

Attorney John Clune, who represents the accuser, criticized the leak, one of several in the case so "On the eve of trial, we are once again reminded that no protections are assured and little efforts are made to correct the evident flaws that have defined this case," Clune said.

Ruckriegle said private questioning will be limited to topics including potential jurors' personal experience with sexual assault, any potential racial prejudice they harbor, whether pretrial publicity has prompted them to form an opinion on Bryant's guilt or innocence and any familiarity they may have with the alleged victim. In all, the jury pool includes 276 Eagle County residents — 205 of whom filled out questionnaires Friday and were called back for more questioning this week after attorneys reviewed the answers over the weekend and eliminated about one-third of the original pool of 300. Seventy-one more potential jurors filled out questionnaires Monday.

Jury selection will be private until at least Wednesday, when reporters will be able to watch and listen through closed-circuit television. By then, the jury pool will likely have been whittled considerably. Opening statements are expected Sept.

Chrebet still battling back

After tough 2003 season, Jets receiver being sidelined by leg injury

BY BARRY WILNER The Associated Press

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. - The headaches and nausea and weakness are gone. The post-concussion syndrome that cost Wayne Chrebet half of last season has disappeared.

Yet Chrebet can't get onto the field. He hasn't practiced in two weeks because of a right leg inju ry and will miss the New York Jets' final preseason game Friday against Philadelphia.

The slow manner in which Chrebet was moving Monday, gingerly placing his leg to the side as he sat, indicated he might be a long way from returning to the field. Perhaps well beyond the Sept. 12 opener against Cincin-But the longest-tenured Jet, now entering his 10th season, isn't saying. He never speaks about current injuries, adhering to coach Herman Edwards' strict policy. Chrebet does admit to being frustrated, though. After the long battle back from the "scary health problems of 2003, he was eager to storm into this season.

"I guess all in due time, it will happen," he said with a smile, "I know what it feels like to be out there and to get hit. You don't for-

"Everything in my mind pointed to coming back and chasing that ring. I try not to think about last year. I'd love to be out there but now I'm just preparing myself as best I can. I had a couple of good weeks of practice, did enough out there to know I am back to my old self."

The Jets certainly hope so. Chrebet has gone from an undrafted free agent who barely made the preseason depth chart in 1995 to a star in New York. He ranks second in team history to Hall of Fame receiver Don Maynard in career catches with 534; Maynard had 627

One of the better slot receivers in the league, Chrebet has used toughness, guile, moves and just enough speed to remain a force over nearly a decade.

"It's like riding a bicycle when you're a kid," fellow receiver Santana Moss said of being sidelined. You might not get on one for three years, but you remember how when you do. You'll be a little rusty when you first get out there, but the more time you've been around, you'll know how to get over it and Wayne does. "I think we all feed off each other, anyway.'

Chrebet hurt his quadriceps on Aug. 16 while making a cut. The injury worsened when blood col-lected in the knee, Edwards said. Edwards is optimistic about Chrebet, believing the vet-eran is making every effort to get back into the lineup

"When you're talking about Wayne, you're talking about a guy who has been playing in the league a long time," Edwards said. "He knows when he can play or not. I need to turn to a guy that when he says he can go, he can go.'

For now, all Chrebet can go through is rehab on his leg. Compared to the uncertainty of post-concussion syndrome, it's a relative breeze.

"Last year, I was trying to feel ood again," he said. "And I do. It feels good to be back. I'm only 31, but it feels like I've been here forever, but I'm really just starting my life. It's crazy when you sit there and think about how long I've been here. I'm just looking forward to a good year, a big

What the Cowboys' offense learned last year is you can only go so far with a lackluster running game.

If George does not have anything left and he has 15 carries for 43 yards in the preseason. there are strong indications that rookie Julius Jones can fill the void. He showed a little something in his eight carries, getting 29 yards. He was even more danfield, catching three passes for 31 vards.

"I'm going to use them both," Parcells said. "[Jones] is doing well. I'm going to use them both. George knows this. He is OK with it. He has always been one of

Redskins pick vet Brunell to start at QB

The Associated Press

ASHBURN, Va. — As expected, Joe Gibbs went with the veteran quarterback.

Gibbs on Monday named Mark
Brunell the opening-day starter for the Washington Redskins, ending the quarterback battle with last season's starter Patrick Ramsey.

"The thing I want to say about that is how pleased we are with our quarterback situation." Gibbs said. "I just think right now it's time to make a decision. I think we need to spend more time with the quarterback and receivers on timing that we haven't been able to get because we're in-and-out, in-and-out."

Brunell already was scheduled to start the final preseason game Friday against Atlanta. Washington opens the regular season at home against Tampa Bay on Sept.

"It's nice to be at this point," Brunell said. "Hopefully this is something that can launch this offense into the regular season."

Washington traded a third-round draft pick to Jacksonville in the offseason to acquire the 11-year veteran.

Gibbs won all three of his Super Bowls in Washington wite experienced quarterbacks Joe Theismann, Doug Williams and Mark Rypien. Brunell certainly fits that mold better than Ramsey, who has 16 games in his carreer compared to 117 for Brunell.

Ramsev initially demanded to be traded after the team brought in Brunell. But Gibbs promised him a fair competition for the job and honored his word. Each player was given two starts in the preseason, but Ramsey pressed too hard and never looked as comfortable as Brunell

"Obviously I'm disappointed," Ramsey said. "I think there are things I could have done better. This is a result of that."

Gibbs said after practice on Monday that he and Ramsey talked for a long time Saturday about his role with the team. Ramsey started 11 games last season before a foot injury sidelined him for the final five.

"I talked to him for a long time about how much he means to us and what we think of him. Nothing's changed. I think he's smart, tough and we're looking forward to a long future for him."

Eagles swoop in, sign Douglas

PHILADELPHIA — Defensive end Hugh Douglas is returning to the Philadelphia Eagles after a one-wear histo

Douglas agreed to a one-year contract for just less than $1 million on Monday, the same day he was released by the Jacksonville Jaguars. Incentives could make the deal worth as much as $3.4 million, said his agent, Drew Rosenhaus.

"Hugh desperately wanted to come back to Philadelphia," Rosenhaus said. "He didn't want to waste any time. He's looking forward to getting back to the fans he loves so much."

The Eagles, who confirmed the signing late Monday, lost starting defensive end N.D. Kalu to a season-ending knee injury two weeks ago, and Rosenhaus said Douglas hopes to fill that void.

"With the injury to N.D. Kalu, he's got a great opportunity to fill a hole," Rosenhaus said.

In his last season with the Eagles, Douglas collected 12½ sacks, then parlayed that into a five-year, $27 million free-agent contract with the Jaguars that included a $6 million signing bonus. But things didn't work out in Jacksonville, and Douglas was cut after getting just 31 tackles and 3½ sacks last year.

Broncos RB Anderson out for season with torn groin

DENVER — Broncos running back Mike Anderson will miss the entire season because of a groin injury sustained last weekend in an exhibition game against Houston.

Denver coach Mike Shanahan said Anderson tore both muscles in the left groin area off the bone. At this point, a specialist has recommended that Anderson let the injury heal instead of undergoing surgery. "Anderson will be out in the area of three months, possibly longer," Shanahan said Monday. "So he will be on injured reserve and will be out for the season."

Anderson, a former Marine, was hurt Priday night with videy night with vides left in the game while on the punting unit. Shanahan said Anderson wasn't supposed to be in the game covering that punt, but his back-up on the punt team was injured. Anderson was shoved from the side as he ran downfield and stepped awkwardly, which caused the injury. With the loss of Anderson, Garrison Hearst likely becomes Quentin Griffin's primary backup, with rookie Tatum Bell behind them.

Vikings' Bennett to miss opener

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Running back Michael Bennett will miss the Minnesota Vikings' regular season opener Sept. 12 against Dallas with a right knee sprain and could be out longer.

Bennett, injured in the third quarter of Friday's exhibition win on a low hit by 49ers safety Erik Totten, underwent an MRI exam Saturday that revealed more damage than originally diagnosed.

Coach Mike Tice initially said that Bennett would be "al little iffy" for the Dallas game, but on Monday declared his starting back out for the opener. Tice said he is hoping to get him back for the second game, in Philadelphia.

Rills sign backup OR Matthews

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Shane Matthews signed with the Buffalo Bills on Monday, bolstering the team's banged-up quarterback corps.

Matthews, an 11-year veteran, is expected to immediately take over as Drew Bledsoe's backup, filling in for Travis Brown, who will miss 4-6 weeks with a sprained left knee.

He has started 22 games in his career, completing 59 percent of his attempts with 30 touchdowns and 24 interceptions, and has a career passer rating of 74.4.

Brown was hurt in Saturday's 30-17 loss at Indianapolis, just days after rookie J.P. Losman broke his left leg in practice. Brown was the Bills' projected backup while Losman, who is expected to miss at least half the season, was being groomed as Bledsoe's successor.

Bills President Tom Donahoe said he would keep Brown, Losman and starting safety Lawyer Milloy on the active roster, rather than end their respective seasons by placing them on injured re-

Milloy is out indefinitely after breaking his right forearm on Saturday. Donahoe said Milloy had successful surgery on Sunday.

Running back Travis Henry, who missed last week with bruised ribs, practiced on a limited basis. Henry said he expects to sit out his second straight preseason game Thursday to be ready for the start of the season.

Brady out at least 2 games

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The Jaguars will be without tight end Kyle Brady for at least two games.

Brady will have surgery Tuesday to insert a pin into a finger injured Friday. The Jaguars open the season Sept. 12 in Buffalo.

"I don't know if there was ligament damage or anything else, other than he'll be out a minimum of three weeks," coach Jack Del Rio said.

Calico sprains both knees

IRVING, Texas — Tennessee receiver Tyrone Calico sprained both knees Monday night when he was dragged down at the end of a run in the Titans' 20-17 exhibition loss to the Dallas Cowbovs.

Calico's legs folded under him when he was tackled from behind by safety Roy Williams as he was going out of bounds on an end-around run in the second quarter.

Coach Jeff Fisher said Calico was moving around and seemed OK after the game. But he said both knees would be examined after the team returned home.

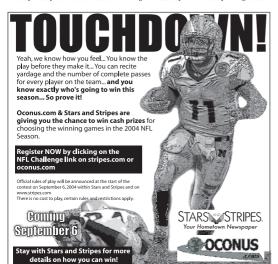

Sanders reports to Colts

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis Colts rookie safety Bob Sanders finally reported to practice Monday, ending a monthlong holdout.

The second-round pick signed what is believed to be a four-year deal, but did not participate in any drills and is likely to sit out even more practices.

Sanders was the last NFL draft pick to sign a contract this year.

Milwaukee tied the team's NL record for consecutive losses, and has scored just seven runs in its last five games. The franchise mark for consecutive losses is 14 in 1994, when the team played in the AL.

Borchard's impressive blast lifts White Sox

CHICAGO - Joe Borchard set a small crowd abuzz with the longest homer in the 14-year history of U.S. Cellular Field

But some small ball and aggressive baserunning by Timo Perez — were just as big Monday in helping the Chicago White Sox beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-8 in a wild interleague makeup game.

"I just put my head down and started running. I could feel it was going a long way. I didn't know how far it would go," Borchard said.

The second-inning drive to right-center off Brett Myers cleared the bleachers and landed in the middle of a concourse - an estimated 504 feet from the plate The previous longest homer at the ballpark that opened in 1991 as new Comiskey Park, was a 495-foot shot by Frank Thomas two years ago against the Twins. "Complete shock," Borchar Borchard said after learning of his feat.

"He crushed it," Myers said. "It definitely was an impressive

The White Sox took a 7-6 lead with two runs in the sixth off Roberto Hernandez (2-5) to make a winner of Mark Buehrle (12-8). Aaron Rowand hit a two-out RBI single off Hernandez to tie it and scored the go-ahead run when third baseman David Bell and Hernandez collided trying to field Perez's bunt single. Rowand made it 9-6 in the eighth with his 20th homer, a two-run shot off Todd Jones.

Jim Thome hit a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth off Shingo Takatsu, but the Chicago closer struck out Doug Glanville for his 14th save in 15 chances.

The game was a makeup of a June 10 rainout and the White Sox's victory clinched interleague bragging rights for the AL this season, 127-125.

Piazza back with Mets, but still in difficult position

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Mike Piazza wants the New York Mets to get him out of a situation that's been difficult to deal with.

For much of this season, he didn't know whether he'd be at catcher or first base until he got to the ballpark and glanced at the lineup card. "Hopefully, they figure it out," he said Monday, when he was activated from the disabled list before a 6-4 loss to Florida. "If they want to keep doing what we're doing, fine. If they want to half and half it is what it is "

Piazza, sidelined since Aug. 6 because of fluid on his left knee, has started 41 games at catcher this year and 49 at first. He was at first base against the Marlins, going 1-for-4 with a third-inning homer off Dontrelle Willis that tied the score at 1.

Piazza, who tied Carlton Fisk for 54th place on the career list with 376 homers, also struck out

Mets General Manager Jim Duquette and manager Art Howe met with Piazza before the game to go over what the team expects for the rest of this season. "We kind of got on the same page," Howe said. "He's going to play a lot at first base, and periodically we'll have him play a game behind the plate.

Piazza was satisfied with the meeting.

"I'm not looking for a defining role or anything like that," he said, "but it would just probably make it a little bit easier to prepare if I kind of know what the future will be

Piazza, who turns 36 on Saturday, isn't sure which position he'd prefer to play. He had wanted to catch long enough to become the career leader in home runs at the position, which he did May 5 when he hit his 352nd to overtake

Braves star names son after ballpark that boos him

ATLANTA - Despite all the hoos Chinner Jones will always

So fond of Shea Stadium where the fans heckle him, the Atlanta star named his new son after the New York Mets' hallnark Monday - Shea Logan Jones

"I love playing there," Jones said. "Check the numbers."

Jones has hit 17 home runs at Shea, his highest total at a visiting park, and his first major league homer came there on May 9 1995. He is a lifetime at .314 hitter at Shea. Jones was with his wife

Sharon for the birth of their third child Monday. He made it back to Turner Field by mid-game, and struck out as a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning of a 7-6 win over San Francisco

Giambi expected to rejoin Yankees for rehab on Tuesday

NEW YORK — Slugger Jason Giambi is expected to rejoin the New York Yankees on Tuesday to continue his rehabilitation.

The five-time All-Star has not played since July 23. He was diagnosed with a benign tumor last Giambi is hoping to again play for the Yankees before the regular season ends.

White Sox release Jackson CHICAGO - Reliever Mike

Jackson, whose 1,005 career ap-pearances rank eighth all-time among pitchers, was put on waivers by the Chicago White Sox on Monday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Jackson, 39, was 2-0 with a 5.01 ERA in 45 appearances for Chicago this season, his 19th in the major leagues.

Also Monday, the White Sox announced right-hander Freddy Garcia will miss his second straight start Wednesday because of tightness in his right forearm.

Detroit's Robertson sharp in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY. Mo. - Good things always seem to happen for the Detroit Tigers when Nate Robertson nitches at Kansas City

With almost 50 friends and family members on hand, Robertson threw his first complete game and was backed by Craig Monroe's two home runs and five RBIs in a 9-1 victory over the Royals.

"Every time I pitch here, the guys just hit the ball," said Roberton (12-7), who became the first left-hander to win 12 games for the Tigers since 1997

The native of Wichita, Kan., is 3-0 in three starts in Kauffman Stadium. The Tigers have won by scores of 17-7, 12-3 and now 9-1.

Monroe had his second career two-homer game and fell just one RBI short of his career high.

"Sometimes it weighs on guys' minds when they're playing close to home," said Robertson, whose brother, Josh, is assistant general manager of the Royals' Double-A club in Wichita.

Robertson allowed one run and six hits, with seven strikeouts and no walks

Running back George not yet part of Cowboys' big picture

BY JENNIFER FLOYD ENGEL Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING, Texas — The "Monday Night Football" cameras kept returning to Eddie George.

They caught the Cowboys running back in various typical-athlete-standing-on-the-sideline poses. Laughing with teammates. Standing, pensive. by himself, Talking to a coach.

He had four rushes for three yards in the Cowboys' 20-17 victory over his former team, the Tennessee Titans, on Monday night.

The images seemed to be hammering on a point that many in the NFL had been making all off-season: George might not have anything left

"I'm not trying to prove anything to anyone," George said. "I've accomplished a lot. I know what I can do. I know what I still have

Who has what left? And is it enough? These have been the questions du jour for the Cowboys offense every jour since they signed the 102 years of starters in the off-season.

All signs, through two preseason games at least, pointed to Uh-O.

Quarterback Vinny Testaverde (40) looked out of sync, while receiver Keyshawn Johnson (32) had patches of rust and George (30) seemed at a loss about his lost step.

Coach Bill Parcells talked of patience and needing time. Monday's game against Tennessee was supposed to provide a better indica-

Watching George run was almost like watching a bull at the end of a bullfight. He looked a step slow, a little tired and unable to take advantage of the few holes that were there. Parcells said it was more a problem of the Cowboys not really trying to establish the run.
